Elaboration Of Platform Promised By Dewey

Nominee Expects To Talk Campaign With National Committee Today

By Ben W. Gilbert

Chicago, June 29.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York today promised to elaborate the planks in the party's platform, which he characterized as a product of inevitable compromises, at his first press conference since he received and accepted the Republican nomination for President yesterday.

He made clear, however, that he did not believe the compromises had "strangled" the platform, but pointed out that it contained more words than necessary because of the compromises.

Dewey revealed that he had begun work on plans for the campaign, but insisted that they would not be in definite shape until he has had a chance to talk with the GOP National Committee, probably tomorrow. In reply to a question, however, he stated with emphasis that he did not plan to resign as Governor of New York to make the campaign.

"Sitting" Campaign Expected

Assuming that President Roosevelt would receive the Democratic nomination, observers believed that a "sitting" campaign would develop, with Dewey spending most of his time in Albany and Roosevelt spending most of his time in the Capital. In such an event, the two candidates probably would make frequent use of the radio.

The press conference lasted more than 35 minutes, with Dewey measuring his answers carefully. A crowd of several hundred reporters packed into a Stevens Hotel ballroom to hear him speak. Many in the rear of the room stood on chairs to observe him.

The platform represented the varying views of a great many people and so had to contain compromises, Dewey said.

"You know this was a completely free convention and absolutely unbossed," he said.

Dewey expresed the view that an international police force was ruled out by the foreign policy plank.

Asked by a reporter whether the platform permitted the creation of such an internatignal force, he asked his questioner to define the words "International Police Force" first.

Reporters Defines Term

The reporter suggested that the term might mean a force composed of troops of peace-loving nations and available to an international agency set up to keep the peace.

"If you mean an army with American soldiers directed by some disembodied spirit as a world agency, I believe that is ruled out," Dewey said.

Turning to domestic issues, he expressed the hope that private enterprise would "be able to restore full employment," although some Federal assistance might be necessary during the transition period to peacetime activity.

However, he warned that America "would not be a free country" if the Federal Government had to maintain full employment.

Several times during the press conference, photographers pointed cameras at Dewey, but each time he asked them not to take any pictures. Before and after the

Sen. Nye Gains Slight Lead in North Dakota

Fargo, N. Dak., June 29 (AP).—Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota tonight apparently had turned back another serious threat to his senatorial career.

After trailing Lynn U. Stambaugh through early returns from Tuesday's Republican primary, Nye went into a slight lead today.

Returns from 2036 of 2251 precincts gave Nye 36,463; Stambaugh, 36,064; Representative Usher L. Burdick, 32,822; A. C. Townley, 1261.

Burdick had the backing of Senator William A. Langer's Nonpartisan League. Six years ago, Langer, then Governor, attempted unsuccessfully to unseat Nye.

Political observers hailed Nye's apparent victory as the chief triumph in a campaign which saw all but three major State offices wrested from the control of Senator Langer's Nonpartisan League.

Representative William Lemke and Charles R. Robertson led a field of seven candidates for the two Republican congressional nominations.

Death Sentence Mandatory

Cathedral Slayer Found Guilty After 40 Minutes' Deliberation

By Jean Reiff

Julius Fisher, 32-year-old Negro handyman who bludgeoned and strangled Miss Catherine Reardon to death on March 1 in the Washington Cathedral library, was found guilty of first degree murder yesterday by a jury that deliberated only 40 minutes to reach the verdict which makes mandatory his execution.

The jury, of eight housewives and four businessmen, was required to bring in two verdicts because of a legal technicality.

The defendant, who showed no signs of nervousness throughout the trial, heard the verdict without any display of emotion. There was not a sound from the half-filled courtroom as the foreman pronounced the condemning words:

"We find the defendant guilty as indicted of murder in the first degree."

The jury first retired at 4:50 p. m. with instructions from Justice Proctor that if the defendant were found guilty of first degree murder it must be on either one of two counts in the indictment and not on both. The two counts were (1) death by choking and strangling and (2) death by beating and clubbing.

The jury on the first return found the defendant guilty on both counts, however, and was asked to retire a second time as Justice Proctor explained to them "one cannot kill a human being twice." On its second return the jury found Fisher guilty on the first count.

That the crime had been both premeditated and deliberated was maintained by the counsels for the Government, United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray in their closing arguments earlier in the day.

It was pointed out that Fisher, in his statement to police following his arrest, had said he told Miss Reardon before he struck her with the piece of firewood:

"If I don't kill you, it will be tthe end of me."

"The killing was malicious," Murray declared. "It may have been only a matter of minutes or seconds, but there was deliberation. Even the defendant admitted on the stand that he got mad, ran upstairs, picked up a

Points Going Back on Three Vegetables

OPA Order Covers Canned Asparagus, Tomatoes and Peas

The OPA last night ordered restoration of rationing for canned peas, tomatoes and asparagus, effective Sunday, and dropped a broad hint that other vegetables now ration-free may require points again soon.

OPA assigned a value of 5 points for No. 2 cans of peas and tomatoes. Asparagus goes back on the list at 10 points.

Administrator Chester Bowles said the changes were in line with OPA's earlier statement that points would be restored when the remainder of the 1943 pack was cleaned up. Indicating that the time is near for placing other vegetables back under rationing, he added:

"We are already getting into the new canning season, the problem now is to distribute this year's output of canned vegetables evenly, giving everyone an opportunity to buy his share. This could not be done with canned vegetables at zero point values."

Other canned vegetables still ration-free are green and wax beans, beets, carrots, corn, spinach and leafy greens.

Price Ceilings Fixed For Fresh Berries

Ceiling prices were announced last night for the 1944 crop of red and black raspberries, dewberries and blackberries, effective July 3.

Typical of the highest retail prices permissible under new order, OPA said, will be: red raspberries, 65 cents a quart in New York (Washington prices usually correspond to those in New York); black raspberries, 61 cents a quart in New York and 58 cents in Chicago and Los Angeles; blackberries and dewberries, 47 cents a quart in New York and 44 cents in Chicago and Los Angeles.

War Not Won, Leaders Warn Home Front

President Gives Out Message From Marshall and King

President Roosevelt last night made public a report from his top military commanders warning the Nation that "there is still a tough fight ahead of us" in the war.

"The battles now in progress entail heavy losses in material which American industry must replace," the report said, "and any slackening in the needed production will only delay ultimate victory."

The somber report, warning against over-optimism on the home front, reached the President from Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff; Admiral Ernest King, and Gen. H. H. Arnold of the Air Forces, the three United States joint chiefs of staff, who visited the Normandy front shortly after the Allies smashed into the French coast.

Following is the text of the report made public at the White House:

"The President has received the

Two D. C. Soldiers, West Virginian Get Oak Leaf Clusters

Three airmen from Washington and nearby areas who paved the way for the Allied landings in France by participating in bombing attacks on French coastal installations and on other vital Nazi targets have been decorated with the Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal, it was announced yesterday. They are:

Lieut. George W. Downes, a fortress bombadier and son of W. W. Downes of 3147 17th st. nw.; Lieut. Douglas P. McKee, bombardier and son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Becomes a '2-Star Man'

Laughlin Draws Second Fine For Contempt in Sedition Trial

By Winifred Nelson

Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin yesterday received a second fine from Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher and became a two-star man in the new "Eicher Contempt Club," said by attorneys to be "an unofficial organization" of persons charged with contempt of court in the big sedition trial.

Membership now includes 6 defense attorneys, 1 defendant and a spectator, some of whom yesterday revealed silver badges concealed under lapels or ties and enscribed with the letters "E-C-C," the initials of the newly founded group.

The badge bears a red star for each fine, and Laughlin is the second attorney to become a two-star member.

Laughlin's $200 fine was added to a $150 penalty he acquired earlier in the trial, because of his conduct in cross-examination of a Government witness, William A. Bockhacker, who was on the witness stand the entire day.

The Chief Justice explained he was imposing the fine in line with action he took on the two previous days when he charged that Defense Attorneys Henry H. Klein and Albert Dilling delayed the trial with their cross-examination tactics.

Almost every third sentence of Laughlin's was his now famous line, "I want an exception to that," which he recited each time the chief justice sustained an objection. Muffled snorts and laughs from the listeners accompanied his questions, especially when Laughlin challenged Eicher's heavy gavel pounding by remarking, "I'll take

Nazi Defeat Held Greatest Of All Time

110,000 Germans Killed or Captured In Vitebsk-Bobruisk Area, Reds Claim

London, (Friday) June 30 (AP).—More than 111,000 German troops have been killed or captured in the fighting around Vitebsk and Bobruisk, the Russians announced today, as terror and disaster overtook the Nazi defenses in White Russia for what some Moscow dispatches described as "the greatest defeat in history."

Bobruisk, last German stronghold on the "Fatherland line" in the east, fell to the Russians yesterday, and with it was completed the liquidation of five encircled Nazi infantry divisions.

In this defeat, accomplished in two days of terrible fighting by the First White Russian Army of Konstantin K. Rokossovsky, 16,000 Germans were left dead on the battlefield and 18,000 were taken prisoner.

Rokossovsky Made Marshal

For his triumph Rokossovsky has been promoted to marshal.

Another 52,000 were killed and 25,000 captured in the Vitebsk area in the first four days of the great summer offensive by the First Baltic Army and the Third White Russian Army, Moscow announced.

In addition Petrozavodsk, capital of the Karelian Soviet republic, was captured.

The Petrozavodsk victory on the shores of Lake Onezhskoe (Onega), was of vast strategic importance because it cleared the last stretch of the main north-south railway in Russia—the vital supply line extending all the way from Murmansk, at the north, to Odessa, on the Black Sea.

Progress of the Soviet forces in their week-old campaign in White Russia was so swift that in both Moscow and London it was predicted Minsk would fall by this weekend.

Reach Upper Berezina River

Field dispatches said the Red armies closed to less than 35 miles from the northeast, east and southeast.

The main thrusts were down the old Smolensk-Warsaw Highway from the northeast, along the Bykhov-Minsk road from almost due east, and up through the Ptich River Valley, along the Gomel-Minsk railroad and highway from the southeast.

On the Smolensk road, Red army troops had reached the upper Berezina River north of Borisov, near Studienka, where Napoleon bridged the sluggish stream November 26, 1812, for the escape of the ragged remnants of his Grand Army.

Two large-scale flank maneuvers accompanied the grand strategy of the Minsk drive. One was a sweep by Col. Gen. Ivan C. Bagramian's First Baltic Army through

Fifth Takes Castagneto in Stifling Heat

Another Column Drives Within 12 Miles of Siena; French Gain

Rome, June 29 (AP).—Fighting in stifling heat and against intensified German resistance, Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's American troops clubbed their way another 5 miles up the west Italian coast yesterday and captured the town of Castagneto, 25 miles from the major port of Livorno (Leghorn).

Another Yank column, plunging inland up Highway 73, hurled the Nazis out of Monticiano and continued on within less than 12 miles of the communications center of Siena, 31 miles below Florence.

Highways behind the hard-hitting American troops were littered with enemy dead and burned-out and abandoned enemy equipment. The roundup of German prisoners continued, with more than 25,000 now in Fifth Army enclosures, and an Allied spokesman declared that the Nazis were "showing signs of confusion" in the coastal sector.

Booby Trap Trees

In an effort to check Clark's relentless pursuit, the Germans were resorting to the most elaborate demolitions—even to felling trees across the roads and stringing the limbs with booby traps.

(War Secretary Stimson said in Washington the Nazis evidently were achieving all possible delay in the Allied advance while they built up their defenses on the "Gothic" line between Pisa and Rimini.)

One German infantry company which attempted to slow the Yank advance by infiltration tactics was reported to have been wiped out.

"Cat and Mouse Game"

An Allied spokesman cited a letter taken from a captured German private, which said, in part:

"For us this is no war any more—it's a cat and mouse game. The Americans are finishing us off in their stride, just as they please."

French troops advancing inland reported substantial gains and capture of the towns of Montaicino,

Yanks Destroy One Garrison On Saipan Isle

Pearl Harbor, June 29 (U.P.).—After 13 days of hand-to-hand fighting unmatched in the Pacific war, American ground troops have wiped out a stubborn garrison of Japanese defenders at Nafutan Point on the southeastern tip of Saipan, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Vice Admiral Marc Mitscher's carrier fleet delivered a heavy attack against Pagan Island in the northern Marianas Tuesday, while Army four-engined bombers struck at Truk.

Nafutan Point was occupied completely by our invasion troops Tuesday, Admiral Nimitz disclosed, after the trapped Japs resorted to every ruse in a hopeless attempt to extricate themselves from a death-or-capture position. It was estimated more than 500 Japs were killed or captured.

Marines and doughboys, meanwhile, continued their advance northward against severe enemy resistance. They made small gains along the western shore, in Garapan town, and in the center of the island, around Mount Tapotchau.

(United Press War Correspondent Richard Johnston reported from the Tapotchau front that the Japanese there apparently had been ordered to stand and fight in what may become the showdown battle for Saipan.

The carrier fleet, which has been pounding the Japs from Guam to the Bonins, found enemy air power apparently was wiped out, at least temporarily, at Pagan, 180 miles north of Saipan. Only one plane was sighted on the ground, and that one appeared unserviceable.

Japanese planes Tuesday night dropped bombs in a United States troop area. Two of the raiders were shot down. American forces continued to enjoy air superiority over the Marianas.

Truk was bombed by Seventh AAF Liberators Tuesday, while other planes raided the Marshalls and other Carolines bases Monday and Tuesday.

Gun Shoots Higher Than Planes Fly

Port Clinton, Ohio, June 29 (U.P.).—The Army today displayed its newest and biggest antiaircraft gun—a piece which can shoot flak shells higher than any airplane can fly.

The huge 120-millimeter gun, until now a closely guarded secret, fires semi-fixed time-fused ammunition at the rate of 12 rounds per minute. A new rammer, operated electrically, automatically sets the fuse and rams home the projectile.

Fighting Rages On 3 Sectors Deep in France

Tottering Cabinet Summoned at Vichy As Revolt Spreads

Allied Supreme Headquarters, London, June 29 (U.P.).—Pitched battles between Maquis and motley forces of Germans and mercenaries were reported under way tonight on three sectors deep in France, as the tottering Vivhey cabinet, obviously frightened by the rising whirlwind, met in extraordinary session.

Simultaneously, Rome dispatches reported announcement of an agreement between representatives of the French and Italian undergrounds to coordinate partisan activity, already dove-tailed in the Piedmont - French border sector, against German movements between the Normandy and Italian fronts.

A German Transocean Agency broadcast reported that an "important" Vichy cabinet meeting presided over by Pierre Laval and attended by all ministers and secretaries of state(began this morning. It was believed that the assassination yesterday of Propaganda Minister Philippe Henroit was among the matters discussed.

Fighting and sabotage continued to erupt throughout France, particularly near the Swiss frontier, in the central section, and along the Spanish border.

Six hundred Germans were killed and wounded in the first large-scale encounter with Lieut. Gen. Joseph Koenig's French forces of the interior in the central mountains, where a German attack was thrown back, a special French communique announced. Maquis losses were placed at 220, and a spokesman said several thousand men on each side were involved, with the Nazis using 105-mm. guns, mortars, and fighter and bomber planes.

To the northwest in Indre Department, 90 miles southeast of the Normandy battle line, guerillas ambushed a German convoy.

Farmer Fined $400 For Building Barn

Fort Dodge, Iowa, June 29 (AP).—Lloyd Bannister, 38-year-old farmer, was convicted in Federal Court today on a charge of building a barn after being refused a permit by the U. S. Department of Agriculture War Board. He was fined $400 and costs. Officials said the case might be the first of its kind in the United States.

British Gain At Caen as Planes Kill Foe on Roads

Reinforcements Brought From Germany First Time Since Landings

Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Friday), June 30 (AP).—The British slugged out local gains 2½ miles north of Caen in fierce fighting yesterday as the Germans rushed up major reinforcements both from the south and from Germany itself for the first time since D-Day in the developing showdown battle of Normandy.

Five miles below Caen, a communique announced, the Allies strengthened their hold on the Odon River bridgehead and wiped out by-passed pockets of resistance in the area of Mondrainville and Tourville, from 2 to 3 miles behind the fighting front.

Allied air might turned its attention yesterday to the tactical reserves speeding up from Paris over devious routes already seared by Allied bombs.

Reserves Are Decimated

The ranks of enemy reserves were decimated by the massed artillery of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and by fighter-bombers which ranged over German communications behind the battle lines. A staff officer said that enemy troops were "being slaughtered" on the roads by our planes.

The Germans fought the British encircling move south of Caen mainly with armor, but the Nazi line of tanks—thinned by the loss of 292 wrecked or disabled since D-Day—including 212 destroyed—was being pressed steadily back upon the Orne River.

It appeared that the first big German counterblow was being shaped as Field Marshal Gen. Karl von Rundstedt struggled to mass men and armor in the hail of Allied air blows. The Supreme Command said a "major coordinated counterthrust" was expected.

Stop Nine Counterblows

Hammering back nine counterattacks in 24 hours, the British in furious, fluid battles cut the road from Caen to Evrecy, 8 miles southwest, and won important high ground a half-mile northeast of Esquay, overlooking Caen, 5 miles away. One Nazi infantry division was so badly mauled it had to be withdrawn.

On the north, the British were fighting for La Bijude, 2½ miles north of Caen. Both sides were throwing in more and more armor as the battle rose toward a crescendo. Nazi defenses were bolstered by 150 tanks.

The Germans were reported to have thrown most of the Fifteenth and Seventeenth armies into the battle of Caen at the eastern end of the Normandy bridgehead.

On the south the British lost momentum as infantry, often fighting hand to hand, turned to clean up the numerous strongpoints over-run on this battlefield of hedgerows and fields.

Fort Surrenders

The fort on Ile Nelee, 1 mile out in Cherbourg Harbor, surrendered and resistance on the northern end of the peninsula dwindled to a stand by some 300 German troops with from 20 to 30 tanks on a 6-mile strip on Cap de la Hague. They were reported being supplied by plane at night.

An Allied salvage fleet was at work in Cherbourg Harbor, hurry-

2 D. C. Officers Give Lives

Saipan Sniper Kills Colonel; Another Dies in Midair Crash

Two Washington Army officers were killed in action at Saipan while serving as observers for Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, the War Department announced yesterday.

They were Col. Carl D. Silverthorne of 5700 Broad Branch rd. nw. and Lieut. Col. Frederick J. Terry of 4450 Volta pl. nw.

Colonel Silverthorne, Chief of the Pacific Theater Section, was killed by a sniper's bullet, while Colonel Terry, a member of the Strategy Section of the Strategy and Policy Group, was killed when a friendly bomber collided with the liaison plane from which he was directing artillery fire.

Both officers were on the staff of Maj. Gen. Thomas T. Handy, Chief of Operations.

Colonel Silverthorne, 54, a native of Virginia, served during the First World War as a private and first sergeant with the Florida National Guard and following the war entered West Point. He was graduated in 1923 and was commissioned in the Cavalry. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Alice Carey Silverthorne, and two children, Alice, 7, and Janet, 8 months.

Colonel Terry was born in Illinois 36 years ago and was graduated from West Point in 1930. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Emily Bennet Terry, and three children, Frederick, 7; Edwin, 5, and Michael, 18 months.

Man Is Revived After 10 Minutes Under Water

The Alexandria Rescue Squad and Alexandria Hospital attendants yesterday revived a man who, they were told, had been under water for 10 minutes.

Harm John Breedon, 30, a dredge worker of 1113 Duke st., Alexandria, fell into the Potomac and remained there until Cliff Inscoe, 1301 South Capitol st., Washington, could locate him with grappling irons. Inscoe drew Breedon into a boat and administered artificial respiration as the craft made for shore. The rescue squad then aided until Dr. E. Smith Ellsworth, interne at the hospital, took charge. A tank of oxygen was used before Breedon revived. Last night he was in "fairly good" condition.

'Normal Tranquillity' Reported in Guatemala

Mexico City, June 29 (AP).—The Guatemalan Embassy said today that "normal tranquillity has been restored in Guatemala except for small disorders." A series of strikes had been reported with 100 estimated casualties in a clash between troops and civilians.

'Without Premonition'

Mother Gets Letter From Boy Written Before Last Battle

Tewksbury, Mass., June 29 (U.P.).—The last letter of a boy to his mother—mailed by his Marine Corps comrades after his death in the South Pacific—was published today.

It was written by Paul Houlihan, a sergeant in an air detachment, dead in action, to his mother, Mrs. Jeremiah Houlihan.

"Dearest Mother:

"Though I feel no premonition at all . . . I have instructed that this letter be forwarded to you should I fail to return from one of the raids which we shall shortly be called to undertake. You must hope on for a month but at the end of that time you must accept the fact that I have sacrificed myself for what we know is right . . .

"I have always admired your courage in the face of continued setbacks. My death would not mean that your struggle has been in vain . . it means that your sacrifice is as great as mine.

"Today we are faced with the greatest challenge to Christianity and civilization that the world has ever seen and I count myself honored to be the right age and fully trained to throw my full weight into the battle. For this I have to thank you.

"There is more work for you to do. The home front will still have to stand united for years after the war is won.

"You must not grieve for me, I have no fear of death.

". . . I am prepared to die with just one regret . . . that is that I could not devote myself to making your declining years more happy by being with you, but you will live in peace and freedom and I shall have directly contributed to that, so here again my life will not have been in vain."

Mercury Hovers Above 90-Mark For Fifth Day

Washingtonians sweltered in the fifth consecutive day of 90-degree heat yesterday, with the temperature at 95 degrees at 3:14 p. m.

Some hope for a break in the heat wave was seen in the official forecast, which predicted today would be fair and not quite so warm, with lower humidity.

The extreme humidity yesterday, which was 81 at 8:30 a. m., made the heat difficult to bear. The temperature failed to drop below 71 at any time during the night. Last year on the same day the high was 87, the low 69.

Parisians Try to Lynch U. S. Troops

London, June 29 (AP).—The Berlin radio, broadcasting what it said was a dispatch from Paris, asserted today that residents of the French capital attempted to lynch American prisoners as they were marched through the streets.

"Late this afternoon almost 1000 Allied prisoners were marched through Paris from Gare du Nord to Gate de l'Est," the broadcast said.

"There were some incidents caused by the population who tried to lynch American soldiers."

Mustn't Touch Planes

Stockholm, June 29 (U.P.).—Berlin dispatches said today that German newspapers had warned Germans against taking pieces of crashed Allied planes as souvenirs, saying they would be punished as "plunders or saboteurs of the German war machine." The smallest part of the Allied planes might reveal Allies' technical progress, the newspapers explained.

ing to prepare it for the great flow of supplies ready to pour in from Britain and the United States.

The Germans' eleventh-hour damage to port facilities has been less than previously reported, and the city itself has fewer battle scars than previously was indicated.

The Allies now are holding approximately 1100 square miles of French territory, a coastline of 125 miles, and have taken 37,333 prisoners since the invasion broke 24 days ago. The Germans have lost from 5000 to 6000 killed, an Allied staff officer announced.

Action flared on the long dormant Southern Front, pointing toward St. Lo, transportation center at the base of the Normandy Peninsula.

With dive-bombers and artillery, the Americans cleaned out strong points and straightened their lines.

The fighting on the Odon River bridgehead was described as fluid. The Germans had no real line here because of a shortage of infantry and were fighting mainly with mobile forces of tanks and self-propelled guns.

Broadly speaking, the British salient extends across the river to a depth of 6 miles on a 2-mile front, which puts advance elements at some points within a mile of the deeper and wider Orne River south of Caen.

From high ground between Evrecy and Caen British artillery now can command all but two roads leading into Caen.

Even those are within reach of British artillery across the Orne River east of Caen, but it is doubtful if they hold ground high enough to permit them to observe results of their fire.

Sergeant and Wife Had Triple Ceremony

New Orleans. (U.P.).—Just to keep the record straight, Master Sergt. Howard H. Walker and his wife, parents of twin daughters now 7 months old, were married three times.

The sergeant, former ground crewman with Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault's Flying Tigers in China, explained the triple marriage this way.

They met at a seamen's dance in Rangoon, Burma. The first was by a justice in Rangoon, the second by a priest when Rangoon fell, and the third came after the couple went to Kumming, China, en route home. They were then married by a justice in Karaschi, India, before the American consul.

"Just so visa papers would be correct," said Mrs. Walker. She said that her father, a former British income-tax official in Rangoon, was killed in North Burma by Japanese bombs and that her English mother is now in the service in India.

The Walkers were en route to Camden, Ark., where she and the babies will live with the sergeant's parents while he waits for a new assignment.

Chicago Police Squad On Alert for Pickpockets

Chicago, (U.P.).—Confidence men and pickpockets, the natural hangers-on of large public gatherings, are in for trouble should they attempt to practice their tricks here during the Republican and Democratic conventions, according to Lieut. John Griffith, head of the confidence squad.

Members of the confidence squad are highly trained specialists who have learned how to be policemen the hard way and are men who wear formal clothes or overalls with equal ease.

The men will be stationed in Loop hotels, banks and at the scene of all public gatherings during the conventions.

Food Bombs in Burma

New York (AP). — Completely isolated by the Japanese, American Field Service ambulance drivers were supplied rations by air during the recent British withdrawal in Burma. RAF pilots picked their food targets on the fly and one AFS volunteer, David Sanders of Highland Park, Ill., got the scare of his life when a "food bomb" landed on the top of his ambulance as he drove along a jungle road.

Command 2 U. S. Infantry Divisions, Eisenhower Reveals

Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 29 (AP).—Maj. Gens. Charles Hunter Gerhardt and Clarence R. Huebner, both veterans of the last war, were revealed today as the commanders of two American infantry divisions in Normandy.

Gerhardt, a son of a general and a graduate of West Point, is commanding the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division, which is made up basically of men from Washington, D. C., Maryland and Virginia. Huebner, who rose through the ranks from private after turning down a West Point appointment, commands the First.

Huebner, 55, fought in the "Fighting First," during the first World War, when it was the first division to land in France. He is quiet-spoken but a stern disciplinarian. He went overseas in World War I as a second lieutenant and wound up as a full colonel.

Huebner Enlisted In 1910

Huebner enlisted in 1910 and served as a mess sergeant, first sergeant, and then regimental sergeant major. He received his lieutenant's commission in 1916 and landed in France in 1917. In 18 months of front line duty he advanced to colonel, commanding a regiment, and won the Distinguished Service Medal, the Purple Heart, Silver Star, Distinguished Service Cross, the French Legion of Honor and the Croix de Guerre.

He left the First Division in 1920 but returned in August, 1439, leading it through the final weeks of the Sicilian campaign. He has been deputy chief of staff of the Fourteenth Army group in Italy under Gen. Sir Harold Alexander.

He was an honor graduate of the Command General Staff School in 1925, and attended the Army War College.

He was born in Kansas and has a wife and daughter living at 3320 Runnymede pl., Washington, D. C. A daughter, Jeannette, was graduated from Georgetown Visitation Convent this month.

Gerhardt is Crack Shot

Gerhardt, 48, took command of the Twenty-ninth Division in July, 1943, after it reached England.

He is a crack shot, a great believer in physical fitness and filled with competive spirit. He issued an open challenge during training to any man in his division to a shooting match with either pistol or rifle for a $2 side bet.

Gerhardt is a rugged disciplinarian and a great individualist and believes in being with his fighting men.

He was graduated from West Point in 1917, and in the first World War participated in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

Gerhardt made the Twenty-ninth Division outstanding in athletics and it won more boxing matches and baseball games than any other in England.

Panels Describe British 1940 Crisis

"Springboard for Attack," the story of Britain's mighty thrust against Hitler's unsuccessful 1940 invasion, is displayed today in 40 colorful panels inside the show windows of the Longfellow Building, Connecticut and Rhode Island aves. nw.

Sponsored by the British Information Services, the panels depict the great wartime contribution of refugees sheltered in England. Technicians, doctors, statesmen and laborers, according to the panels, contributed their skill to nullify the German thundershocks.

Yanks Bomb Henyang, Now Held by Japs

Chungking (Friday), June 30 (AP). Encircled and battered Hengyang has been bombed by American planes and left aflame after abandonment of the American air base nearby, it was disclosed last night by an American communique which referred to that Hunan Province railway junction as a "Japanese stronghold."

A Chinese communique declared that the city still was in the hands of the defenders, but was based on reports through Tuesday night, while Stilwell's report of the bombing of the junction detailed operations Thursday.

A later communique early today reported the Chinese had scored their first success in Hunan in weeks by recapturing Yiyang, 120 miles northwest of Hengyang.

The Chinese also said their troops who had remained behind Japanese lines east and west of the Canton-Hankow railway had started a large-scale counteroffensive at both ends of the 85-mile Hengyang front.

The American planes, which have been thrown into battle to stem the Japanese tide down the Canton-Hankow Railway, dropped 1000-pound bombs "on the USAAF airfield at Hengyang, completely destroying the runway, Stilwell's communique said.

(A Japanese broadcast reported the fall of the American air base, describing it as "one of the most important bases of the United States Air Force in China, from which the enemy long had planned to raid the Japanese mainland."

(This broadcast said that the fall of the field made three other bases in the area virtually useless, and that American airmen now must operate from bases at Liling, 75 miles southwest of Hengyang, and Kweilin, 175 miles southwest of Hengyang, Kweilin, provisional capital of Kwangsi, may be one of the goals of the Japanese Hunan offensive.)

Myitkina Gains

Kandy, Celon, June 29 (U.P.).—Chinese troops have destroyed several more Japanese strong points and captured ammunition and equipment in the north Burma stronghold of Myitkyina. American troops wiped out two bunker positions in the northern section. The Allies now hold more than three-fourths of Myitkyina.

Salween River Push

Chungking, June 29 (AP).—Elements of Chinese forces have reached a point only 3 miles north of the main Japanese Yunnan Province base of Tengchung, in the Salween River offensive, aimed at reopening an overland supply route to China, a Chinese communique said tonight.

the Lepel lake country on the northeast. His forces were approaching the important center of Polotsk and were about 30 miles from the Polotsk-Minsk railway. Cutting that line would isolate Minsk from the north and Polotsk from the south.

25,000 Square Miles Retaken

The other outflanking movement was on the south, where Rokossovsky's army was moving past Starai Dorogie along the Robruisk-Brest Litovsk Highway which skirts the Pripyat marshes and leads to positions where the Warsaw railway could be cut south of Minsk.

Atogether, in less than a week of fighting, four separate Red armies have reoccupied more than 25,000 square miles of territory, liberated more than 6000 towns and villages, and destroyed several hundreds of enemy tanks and planes.

Military opinion in London was that German lack of tanks was a chief cause of the defeat. It was estimated that half the German armor was in Italy and Normandy and that Hitler, intuitively expecting a Soviet offensive south of the Pripyat marshes, had removed many tanks from the White Russian front before the Russian drive began there.

Moscow dispatches said "Flying Artillery" had been used against German armor on a scale probably the greatest in history.

In London it was said that the Russians may have begun their campaign against Finland June 10 to trick the Germans into propping up that satellite and thus weakening the Nazi armies elsewhere.

Navy Ace Gets 6 Japs in Day For 19 Total

Carrier Flagship Off the Marianas, June 22 (Delayed) (AP).—The boy who wouldn't go home when he had a chance because "there are just a few things I wanted to clear up first," is now the Navy's top fighter ace by a wide margin.

He's Lieut. (j. g.) Alexander Vraciu, East Chicago, Ind., who shot down six Japanese dive bombers in a single day in the West Marianas June 19 to bring his total bag of Japanese planes to 18. He added another in battle over the Japanese fleet June 20 to bring his present bag to 19.

(The previous Navy record for planes shot down was held by Lieut. (j. g.) Ira Kepford of Muskegon, Mich. The Army record is 27 planes shot down.)

"Those six were the easiest of all," he said. "It was sort of like ripping a razor through a bunch of cotton."

Vraciu downed his first plane at Wake last October while in Butch O'Hare's famed fighter squadron. He added a twin-engined bomber at Tarawa and three more at Kwajaelin, then four "Zekes" at Truk in February and two more there in April. His twelfth was brought down while en route to Saipan.

After the second carrier he was on was torpedoed some time ago, Vracui had a chance to return to the States but he refused.

"They thought I was crazy for wanting to stay out here, so crazy they took me in to show me to the admiral," he said.

Vraciu, a slim, browned, alert youth is a former runner for Depauw University. He entered the Navy in June, 1941.

Vraciu said the first three of his six-plane bag went down quickly. In fact, he used only 10 shots per gun for each of his six victims.

"They were like a swarm of bees they were so thick against the water below," he added. "I felt like a kid with a plate of cookies—afraid someone else was going to take some even though I had all I could stuff."

He caught two of his victims near a destroyer which held its fire as he downed both. All "flamed like gasoline soaked tissue." The last victim evidently blew up, including his bombload.

Alexandria Board Asks More Tires

With only 340 passenger car tires allocated through the Alexandria War Price and Rationing Board for June as compared to 600 applications, Capt. James S. Douglas, jr., chief clerk of the board, took the lead this week in requesting an equalization with the Arlington County quota which he said he "understands" to be 600 tires.

Writing to Bernard C. Goodwin, director of the District Office of Price Administration for northern Virginia at Roanoke, he pointed out that the Alexandria board meets the requirements of the 1500 car owners at the United States Naval Torpedo Station at Alexandria, under OPA rulings, without regard to their place of residence. In addition, 2000 cars from other States listed with the board share in supplemental gasoline and tires allocated to Alexandria, he said.

Estimating Alexandria's population at 70,000, he said the board is of the opinion that Arlington County's population is about 95,000 and that the Naval Torpedo Station cars served by the Alexandria board can be expected to offset the 25,000 difference in population. His letter continued:

"Regardless of the claims of the Arlington Board as to their estimated population, which we have heard is as high as 120,000, some weeks ago the county manager accepted an award on safety for cities between 50,000 and 100,000 thereby publicly admitting that Arlington was not beyond that figure. We believe 95,000 is correct."

According to Mrs. Norma McCaleb, tire clerk of the Alexandria board, the basic quota for May was 200 tires with a supplementary ration of 210 bringing the figure up to 410 for that month. While the June quota of 300 was 100 tires above the basic figure for May, only 40 tires are permitted as a supplementary ration for the current month bringing the figure to 340.

Douglas concluded in his letter to Goodwin, "I am sure the District office wants to be absolutely fair in allocating the quotas. However, it is posible that the information outlined above was not available to you."

DEWEY

conference he willingly posed for pictures, however.

During his acceptance speech last night, Dewey several times revealed annoyance at photographers standing on the rail and benches on the speaker's stand, photographing him as he spoke. Convention officials finally prevailed on the photographers to leave the platform.

Will Consult Willkie

Dewey said that he planned to consult with all leaders of the party in making his plans. Asked if Wendell Willkie, 1940 GOP standardbearer, was included, he said that he was. (The Associated Press said Willkie, in New York, had no comment on this remarks.)

He emphasized that campaign plans would be prepared jointly with Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, the Republican nominee for Vice President. Bricker left Chicago today to attend a reception in his honor this evening in Columbus. Dewey said he would keep in touch with Bricker by telephone.

Following the press conference, Dewey spent most of the day conferring with party leaders. More than a score of politicians filled the corridor outside his twenty-fifth floor suite, waiting for an opportunity to confer with him.

Asked for his views on the Securities and Exchange Commission, he replied, "I have always felt that setting up the SEC was one of the best things the Administration ever did. I was surprised to find an article by A. A. Berle (Assistant Secretary of State) which credited some prosecutions which I helped to start with inspiring the SEC."

Sees Room for Improvement

"However," he added, "I have a good deal of opinion on the way it is administered. They have not done the best job of stimulating new capital to create new jobs. A larger flow of good securities in which the Nation could invest could be made possible. What is needed is better administration and better appointments. It will not be difficult."

He expressed a "high regard" for the operation of insurance companies under State control and pointed out that a New York State law compelled insurance companies to get together with the State to determine rates. If the Federal Government steps in and directs that insurance companies cannot combine because of the antitrust laws, officials of insurance companies would always be in danger of violating one or the other laws, he said.

This "Perilous situation" would be "extremely dangerous for the savings of the people."

Insurance companies have weathered economic storms much better than other concerns, Dewey said.

Asked if he was satisfied with the way gasoline is rationed, he replied, smiling: "Do you know anybody who is?"

Asked about plans for a Cabinet, he explained that he had "No Cabinet views at this time."

"I haven't a single individual in mind at this time and I shall not have any for any length of time," he said.

"Could Be" a Democrat

A reporter recalled that Dewey promised in his acceptance speech to appoint the ablest men available to the Cabinet and asked whether that would permit a member of the Democratic Party to hold a Cabinet post in his administration.

"Could be," Dewey replied.

for the period through July 29 include the return of brandied, spiced and pickled fruits to rationing. They get the same point values as other canned fruits.

Spaghetti sauce and tomato sauce in eight-ounce containers are reduced a point, but vegetable juice combinations in 46-ounce cans get a new value of five points, up from four.

All canned fruits, still in short supply, retain their current high values, while all frozen fruits and vegetables remain ration-free.

Indicating further that most canned vegetables will be back under rationing, Curtis Rogers, processed foods rationing chief, said the supply for civilians will be 15 to 20 per cent less during the new pack year, commencing Saturday. Increased requisitions for the armed forces have trimmed the public's allotment, he said.

Umberto's Wife to Ask Divorce, Swiss Say

New York, June 29 (AP).—A Swiss Telegraph Agency dispatch from the Italian frontier today quoted Italian newspaper reports that crown Princess Marie Jose, wife of Prince Umberto of Italy, "intends to ask for a divorce and retire to private life in Sweden." The dispatch was reported to the OWI.

WARN

following report from General Marshall, Admiral King and General Arnold, three United States joint chiefs of staff:

"On our return from the front in Normandy we preceive a state of mind in this country against which we believe the public should be warned.

"The progress of our armed forces on all fronts, against fanatical and determined enemies, should be a source of the highest gratification to the American people. Our forces of land, sea and air, many of them recently in action for the first time, have shown not only the courage that was expected of them but a toughness and a technical skill that has made them more than a match for the veterans whom they opposed.

"Backed by the enormous material production that has been made possible by American industry and labor, we can look forward to an eventual complete victory over our enemies.

Warning to Home Front

"This depends, however, on a continuance of the full support now given to the fighting forces by the home front. The battles now in progress entail heavy losses in material which American industry must replace, and any slackening in the needed production will only delay ultimate victory.

"No effort required in the home-front battle should be diverted by any element in the production machine—whether it be ownership, management, rank-and-file workers, or those in the service of the Government itself.

"The recent favorable course of the fighting seems to have persuaded some people that the war is as good as won, and that accordingly they can throw up their war jobs and go back to civilian life. No doubt most of the men at the front would also like easier and better paid peacetime jobs; but they are sticking to the jobs they have now.

"There is still a tough fight ahead of us. Anyone can see that desertions on the fighting fronts would protract the war and reduce our prospects of victory. Desertions on the homefront would tend to the same result. The war is not yet won; it will be won the sooner if everybody in war work sticks to his job till complete victory has been attained."

SEDITION

an exception to Your Honor's gavel, too."

The witness Bockhacker revealed earlier in the day that he had been introduced to several sailors of the American Navy at the German-American Bund meetings which he attended as an "undercover" man between 1937 and 1939.

Chief Federal Prosecutor O. John Rogge questioned:

Q. When was the first time you saw American sailors at the meetings?

A. Mr. Schwinn (the defendant Herman Max Schwinn) said, "here are two of our members from the American Navy—from the Battleship West Virginia."

Q: Did you ever see any of them again?

A. Yes, later, when an officer came in and arrested two of the sailors. Later I saw the sailors in civilian clothes washing dishes and cleaning up the place at Bund headquarters.

The testimony implied that the sailors had been discharged from the Navy for their membership in the German organization.

Defense Cross-Examines

Defense Attorney Laughlin took his turn with the witness:

Q. When did you give up being a spy?

(Prosecutor Rogge's objections were sustained).

Q. Where are you staying in Washington?

A. At the YMCA.

Q. Do you know the Government witness, Roy Arnold, who also stayed there?

A. I did.

Q. Ever eat with him?

A. No.

Q. Ever go swimming with him?

A. No.

(Rogge's objection sustained.

Also Sang National Anthem

Q. You say that certain German songs were sung at the German house in Los Angeles (Bund headquarters). Were there any American songs?

A. Yes—the National Anthem.

Q. Did they sing any popular songs—like "Home on the Range?" (Rogge's objection sustained.)

Q. Did you ever talk with Rogge?

A. Yes, several times.

Q. Did you ever talk with her? (pointing to a court secretary who wore a large, red paper flower in her hair.) (Rogge jumped to his feet in objection.)

Bridegroom's 'Arrest' No Joke to Bride

Memphis, Tenn. (U.P.).—It was just an old American custom, but the bride was horrified. U. S. Army Corpl. Barney Lofton of Memphis, who wed an English bride in Wales, missed the reception after the ceremony and almost caused his bride to have nervous prostrations—through no fault of his own. As the GI groom and his new wife left the church, two Army MPs took him off to a waiting jeep. They eventually returned the groom and explained that it was an "American joke." The bride's reaction to American humor was most explosive.

MURDER

stick of wood and came back and hit her."

Murray went on to describe how Fisher had concealed the body in the subbasement crypt, wiped up the blood stains and concealed the murder weapon.

"Were those the actions of a person acting on impulse?" he demanded.

The plea of the defense counsel was that the crime had been committed during a moment of temporary insanity, in a moment of impulsive rage and fear.

"I am not arguing that Fisher should be turned loose on the street," Houston told the jury. "We do not deny that Miss Reardon was brutally killed by him. But I do say that he was caught in a vise of fear. I say that if Miss Reardon had been colored or that Fisher had been white, there would have been no murder resulting from the argument and the first slap."

"Would Fisher have left the body in plain view of anyone descending the stairs to the basement while he wiped up the bloodstains, if he had been of a sound mind?" Houston demanded. He ended his argument by saying:

"The whole thing can give you only a picture of a person who was not normal."

Although both the Government and the defense had rested late Wednesday, the defense reopened its cas yesterday morning to introduce new testimony. A doctor and serologist told the jury that a sample of fluid taken from Fisher's spine had shown the man was suffering from neuro-syphillis. Following their testimony, Dr. Edward Y. Williams, psychiatrist, who testified Wednesday, returned to the stand to explain that neuro-syphillis might have affected Fisher's brain tissues and therefore his sanity.

The Government also brought a serologist and a psychiatrist to the stand. Miss Vernal M. Walston, a medical technician at Gallinger Hospital, stated that she had made tests of the fluid taken from Fisher's spine, but had found no evidences of neurosyphilis.

Dr. Edgar D. Griffin took the stand after her and stated definitely that the defendant did not have cerebral syphilis and that his sanity therefore could not have been affected by the disease.

3000 Rooms Seen Needed for D. C. Warworkers

Marvin R. Wire, director of the War Housing Center, yesterday said at least 3000 rooms in the Washington area can be rented to warworkers before the end of July, if home owners register vacancies with the center, at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

The need for space to house thousands of workers for the War, Navy, FBI and other Government and private war enterprises is critical, he declared.

With the Navy requiring 1100 vacancies for recruited workers, the War Department 1700, and the FBI about 500 during July, every home owner in this area is urged to register available rooms at once, and to keep the center regularly informed of vacancies as they occur.

2000 Yank Planes Strike at Germany

Battle Ahead

Yanks Seize Cherbourg Harbor Fort

By Henry T. Gorrell

Cherbourg, June 29 (U.P.).—American planes swept down in a savage attack today on German strong points and emplacements in the Cap de la Hague, and the infantry moved out through the thick gorse and heather to knock out the determined Germans who were defending this last bit of the Cherbourg Peninsula which remained to them.

Reports from advanced command posts said the doughboys were making headway fast despite the fierceness of enemy resistance, which was supported by tanks and artillery, including two 11-inch railroad guns.

Fort Central, on the outer breakwater at the entrance to the harbor, was silenced this morning.

Moppers-up herded in the last Germans in the Maupertus airdrome area east of Cherbourg. They had taken 1102 prisoners in the final 24 hours.

This left only the several hundred Germans remaining in the Cap de la Hague Peninsula after 450 had been taken since yesterday.

The remaining Germans, when the infantary went in today, were holding a line roughly 8 miles west of Cherbourg, extending from Vauville on the southwest side of the cape peninsula to Greville on the northeast side.

It was believed that the Germans still had between 20 and 30 light tanks and the final attack was no picnic.

The mopping up of the last resistance nest was speeded because the German guns were firing sporadically into the American positions in the western and southwestern suburbs of Cherbourg.

Aircraft Centers, Refineries Targets; Normandy Also Hit

London, June 29 (AP).—Two thousand American planes—1000 Liberators and Fortresses with an equal number of escorting fighters—struck deep into Germany today and blasted aircraft production centers, an oil refinery and other targets, while over the Normandy battlefront Allied fighters and medium bombers swarmed in scorching support of ground troops.

Another prong of this ceaseless aerial offensive was aimed again at the Pas-de-Calais coast of France against the German flying-bomb installations. RAF heavy bombers plastered launching ramps and equipment in the afternoon, losing five planes.

The Allies poured explosives both on the inner and outer bastions of Europe, and headquarters disclosed that the Germans now were forced to send their fighters from bases more than 100 miles behind the lines, as the result of Allied attacks on airdromes.

American Marauders and Allied fighter-bombers ranged over the Normandy battle area in waves, while others assaulted Nazi supply lines.

At least 44 of the 200 German planes which challenged the Allies over the battle area were shot down.

The Fortresses and Liberators which hit Germany dropped bombs on aircraft plants at Leipzig, Oschersleben and Aschersleben, all within 90 to 100 miles southwest of Berlin; at Fallersleben, 40 miles east of Hanover, and on an oil refinery at Dohlsen, also in the Hanover area.

Heavy flak and swarms of German fighters were encountered. Escorting fighters shot down at least 33 enemy planes. This score brought to 294 the number of enemy planes destroyed since D-Day by Eighth Air Force fighters alone.

No announcement was made of the number of American planes lost.

In the last 24 hours of air assault, the Allies also have rained destruction on three oil refineries in Romania, four air bases in France and Bulgaria, five rail centers in France, Germany and Romania, and on scores of other military targets.

The American heavies were preceded in the darkness by some 500 RAF Halifaxes, which hit rail yards in the region of Metz, with a loss of 20 planes. Night-flying Mosquitoes without loss struck the Saarbrucken rail center and at an oil plant near Essen in the Ruhr Valley.

German supplies also received a punishing blow from the south Wednesday night when Italy-based Allied bombers struck at objectives at the Romanian Danube River port of Giurgiu. The Allied fliers, in some 1200 sorties, lost six planes, and 28 enemy craft were destroyed.

Field dispatches to Allied headquarters indicated the Germans in France still had plenty of air force personnel but were short on planes. Hundreds of pilots and ground crews were among prisoners taken in Normandy, but investigation disclosed empty hangars.

King, Queen Visit Homeless Robot Victims

Southern England, June 29 (U.P.).—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth today paid a surprise visit to homeless victims of Germany's robot blitz, as the flying bombs continued to come over at a steady tempo, despite Allied fighters and ground defenses.

Coastal antiaircraft put up a heavy barrage against the winged projectiles, and fighters were reported shooting down many of the blind bombs before they could cross the Channel.

The royal couple heard many reports of narrow escapes and individual heroism as they walked along the wards of the rest center, halting to say words of encouragement to the injured.

Members of Parliament became restive over the government's policy of secrecy concerning the robot blitz, expressing the fear that public morale may be lowered—not by the bombs but by the secrecy shrouding them.

Home Secretary Herbert Morrison was asked to publish weekly figures of casualties to counteract German propaganda. Morrison said he would give the matter "careful consideration."

For the second consecutive afternoon, German long-range guns opened fire across the Channel. About 40 shells were reported to have fallen in Dover.

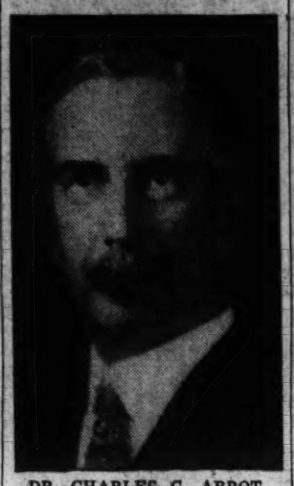
Leading Expert On Sun Retires



DR. CHARLES G. ABBOT, who is said to know more about the sun than any other man, is retiring as secretary of the Smithsonian Institution

Abbot to Quit As Official of Smithsonian

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, 72, yesterday announced his resignation, effective tomorrow, as secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, after serving for 16 years. Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary, automatically will succeed as acting secretary.

"I feel that it would be quite unfair to the Institution to continue in this responsible position when in the nature of things my capacities must gradually begin to decline," Dr. Abbot said. He will continue with Smithsonian as a research associate.

Reputed to know more about the sun than any person living, Dr. Abbot was the first to note the variability of its radiations.

He has used the sun's rays to heat his home and cook his meals, and developed a process of long-range weather forecasting.

Dr. Wetmore has been director of the National Museum as well as assistant secretary of the Smithsonian since 1925. His specialty is birds.

Alexandrians Asked to Help Wac Project

The first project to be accepted by the Alexandria Red Cross Camp and Hospital Service under the guidance of the new chairman, Mrs. Robert O. Lord of Yale dr., Alexandria, is a playground for the Women's Army Corps encampment at Gravelly Point near the Washington National Airport, it was announced yesterday at a meeting of the camp and hospital committee in the home of Mrs. E. F. Connely, 423 South Lee st.

Volunteers from Alexandria plan to work with other members of the regional Potomac Council of the Camp and Hospital Service to furnish an outdoor playground with areas for softball, croquet, badminton and darts, as well as tables, porch chairs and sun umbrellas.

A sand beach for sun bathing will be provided, and in lieu of trees, flowers and other permanent plantings, the playground will be surrounded by boxes of flowers.

As the playground must be set up within two weeks, the committee is soliciting contributions of furniture and games which the Motor Corps is ready to collect when notified at the chapter house, Alexandria 8300. The coming of hot weather has brought an immediate need for recreational facilities for the Wacs at the encampment, Mrs. Lord pointed out.

She said that a large number of games already have been given to the committee and many more will be purchased, but it is hoped that the generosity of Alexandrians will provide outdoor equipment in usable condition. In particular, the project requires beach mattresses, large beach towels and other beach equipment.

In connection with the project, the committee is in need of additional storage space accessible to the chapter house, to augment that provided by Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black at their Lee st. home.

Indictment Echo of Miller Murder Trial

Walter Lee Yow, 36, Highpoint, N. C., truck driver, was indicted yesterday on a charge of obstructing justice in halting the Robert I. Miller murder trial last month with a story that a Government witness had offered him a bribe.

Yow claimed Lamar Johnson, Government witness, had offered him $100 to back Johnson's testimony that Miller threw a second gun beside the slain Dr. John E. Lind.

William Maurice Muchnic, 62, was indicted on a charge of concealing $30,000 in assets from a trustee in a bankruptcy proceeding.

Jose M. Sliva, 44, Fall River, Mass., was indicted on charges of making a false statement when he applied for a passport and of falsely representing himself as an American citizen. Records show Silva was born in the Azores and never became a citizen.

Condition of Child Still Undetermined

Seven-year-old Dickey Rogers, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Rogers of 809 N. Buchanan st., Arlington, who was in collision with an automobile driven by William D. Sioris of 729 N. Buchanan st., late Wednesday afternoon, was still in an undetermined condition at the Arlington Hospital last night. The driver of the car was not held.

Suffering from a broken wrist, possible fracture of the jaw, severe bruises, lacerations, and possible internal injuries, the boy's condition is serious, his mother stated late yesterday.

Church Women Meet

A joint meeting of all committees of the Arlington Council of Church Women was held at Luber Run Park last night, with a picnic supper in Campfire Glen. A service was led by Mrs. Lee A. Peeler, and the business and planning session was led by the president, Mrs. W. K. Handy.

Yanks Destroy 12,000 Jap Planes in War

By George Connery

More than 12,000 Japanese planes have been destroyed in the air and on the ground by American fliers since Pearl Harbor, but the ratio of kills is falling off because not enough Jap craft are coming up to give battle, it was disclosed yesterday.

Since the start of the war, naval fliers have shot 5521 Jap craft out of the air. In 1944 alone they have wrecked 738 Jap planes on the ground. Army fliers have, since December 7, 1941, bagged 4103 Jap planes in combat and 1724 on the ground.

Accumulation of naval strength in the Pacific, and the increased effectiveness of aerial reconnaissance, has allowed carrier task forces to surprise and destroy Japanese aircraft before they can leave the ground, Rear Admiral A. W. Radford, acting deputy chief of naval iar operations, explained.

"As a result," he said, "fewer Jap planes are available for us to shoot down. In addition, the Jap pilot is becoming less and less anxious to close with ours. So the air ratio of victories has dropped slightly."

A Navy announcement said:

"Combining the available figures not including ground losses for 1942 and 1943, which are being compiled, the Navy enjoys a 4.8 to 1 advantage over Japan in air war, having shot out of the air and destroyed on the ground 6259 planes, as against 1277 lost. Figures for destruction of Jap planes do not include losses inflicted by antiaircraft fire. They cover December 7, 1941, through June 23, 1944."

Naval Building Program Hits All-Time High

The biggest month in naval building history and a 26 per cent jump in the "top urgency" program for heavy artillery were achieved in May, the War Production Board reported yesterday.

Completion of navy ships climbed to an all-time high of more than 400,000 displacement tons, or nearly 100,000 tons over the previous peak of last November.

The tonnage output was 58 per cent higher than in April and three per cent greater than scheduled. Landing vessel deliveries reached a total of 198,000 tons—more than 50 per cent above the record set in April.

Arms production generally was one per cent behind schedule, but one per cent ahead of April. "Some of the weapons most vital to the invasion made a particularly good showing; aircraft, landing vessels, naval ships and heavy artillery were all encouraging features," the monthly munitions communique stated.

Some of the most important programs, including heavy trucks and radar, failed to meet schedule, however, mainly because of manpower shortages. The report cautioned against letdowns due to overconfidence and against "cutback jitters"—fear lest war jobs are about to play out.

Production curtailments will be relatively small in the immediate future, and will not alter the fact, WPB asserted, that "the total size of the munitions program is due to increase some 13 per cent during the next six months.

"The relatively few war workers who are freed by program adjustments will, in the great majority of cases, be shifted at once to other war jobs," it was said.

REA Aid Losing Job, Begins to Feel Hunger Strike

St. Louis, June 29 (AP).—Admitting he was a "little hungry," Chester Lake, field representative for the Rural Electrifications Administration, today began his second day of a hunger strike which he says will continue until the REA is removed from "political domination and made an independent agency once more."

Lake, whose $5800-a-year job as assistant to REA Administrator Harry Slattery has been abolished effective Saturday, ate chicken a la king and apple pie at noon yesterday. He has not eaten since.

"The hardest part of my fasting is watching other people eat," he mused. "I sat at the dinner table last night for a few minutes watching the rest of the family eating. That was tough."

He plans to continue his work until Saturday and then go to bed. Mrs. Lake said she would insist that he drink fruit juices if he becomes weak.

Show Boat Closes As Cupid Steals Stars

Cincinnati, Ohio (U.P.).—Shortage of womanpower, not manpower, almost ruined business for Billy Bryant, whose Show Boat has been a regular summertime feature here until this year.

Love did it. First his daughter, star of his shows, married and quit her job; then his new leading lady took time for a honeymoon. So Bryant didn't take any more chances. He closed the show until one of his stars could return.

Police Chief Knows Now How It Feels

Lorain, Ohio (U.P.).—Even an old story's funny when the joke's on a police chief.

Police Chief H. J. Miller flagged down a motorist and asked him to push "Jenny," the village police car, to a repair station.

It probably was just as well with Miller that it was not until after the obliging stranger had sped away that he discovered he'd forgotten to turn the ignition key.

Gripers in Army Get Setback in Czech Comparison

Camp Blonding, Fla., (U.P.).—The habitual Army "griper" received a serious setback when Pvt. Frank A. Eisenstein, of Co. E, 206 Battalion Infantry Replacement Center, a former lieutenant in the Czech army, told of how much better an American private lives than does a European private.

"In both the Czech and German armies, a private must salute private first class, a private first class must salute a corporal, a corporal must salute a sergeant, and so on up . . ." Eisenstein said.

Eisenstein scoffed at "food gripers." "We had to live on black coffee and black bread, with trimmings like meat and vegetables thrown in sometimes as an added attraction."

Trout Do All Right By Captain in Italy

Cincinnati, Ohio (U.P.).—You can't keep a good trout fisherman down for long.

Capt. Ferd Bader, president of the Southern Ohio Dog and Game Protective Association, now with the Army in Italy, writes:

"Found me a dandy little mountain stream, clear as crystal and cold as ice. Got some nice speckled trout."

Hoover Sees Ticket Strong, Party United

By a Post Staff Writer

Chicago, June 29.—Herbert Hoover said today that the Dewey-Bricker ticket is "the strongest ticket we can get," and expressed "confidence" in the action taken by the Republican National Convention which ended yesterday.

"We have a good fighting candidate and a good second man," the former President stated at a press conference.

"Two-party government is essential to democracy and it is the duty of the opposition to oppose," he said. "Dewey has led off with a good fighting speech of opposition."

He discounted opposition to the Republican Party's platform which developed among the GOP Governors at the convention.

Calls Party United

"I don't think the Republican party has ever been more united than it is today," Hoover said. "No one has said tha they will not support the candidate."

Asked about opposition to the foreign policy plank expressed by Wendell L. Willkie, unsuccessful Republican candidate for President in 1940, Hoover said, "I don't think the Willkie statement is so far from the plank. The language is not as important, however, as making the peace work."

Hoover said he was "hoping for a miracle," but didn't expect the war in Europe to be over before the summer of 1945. The war against the Japanese probably will end within a year after the war in Europe is won, he said.

Asked about his personal plans, Hoover said, "outside of winning the war, my own interest is in the problems of peace."

Asked if he was going to take part in the campaign, he said, "I am going to support the ticket, but I am not a barnstormer."

He revealed that he was writing a book on American history covering the 25-year period starting in 1914.

Rationing, Price Control

Turning to postwar questions, Hoover expressed the view that rationing controls could be terminated with the end of the war, with price controls retained until production—particularly of food—comes up to demand.

Wage controls could be dropped because a labor surplus will exist which will act to hold wages down, he said.

"With all the best efforts in the world, I do not believe that there will be full employment immediately after the end of the war," he declared.

Bacteriologist Wins Citation For Fever Study

East Lansing, Mich., (U.P.).—Dr. I. Forrest Huddleson, internationally famous Michigan State College bacteriologist, recently won a citation for "outstanding research accomplishments" in the study of undulant fever from Sigma Xi, national scientific honorary society.

In his 28 years of study, Dr. Huddleson has developed brucellin, a curative agent for treating undulant fever in man, and brucellergin, a skin test material for diagnosis. More recently, he perfected an immunizing agent for veterinarians and others who work with cattle, from which the disease may be contracted.

Chicago High Girl Shows Shorthand Speed

Chicago, (U.P.).—Jean Whyte, 17-year-old high school senior, scored more than 200 words a minute in a special shorthand test on dictation from the Congressional Record.

Miss Whyte, who will receive a diamond medal for the accomplishment, began the study of shorthand and typing in her freshman year, took 120 words a minute in her second year, and 160 words in her third year.

Her best performance was for a five-minute test, with only 31 errors out of 50 allowed. She transcribed the material in 45 minutes, half of the time allowed in the test.

GOP Defers Selection of New Chairman

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—Selection of a new chairman for the Republican National Committee—the man who will direct Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's presidential campaign—was deferred today pending discussions between the New Yorker and a subcommittee of six, but Herbert Brownell, jr., New York lawyer, still was the most talked of possibility.

Brownell would fit Dewey's youth pattern, outlined in his acceptance speech, but committee members were uncertain whether he would be willing to take an extended leave from his law practice.

The presidential nominee told a news conference he wanted to consult with his running mate, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, and national committee members and State chairmen still in Chicago before making a choice of campaign directors.

"I want to make it clear it will be a joint selection," he emphasized.

Spangler May Remain

Friends of Harrison E. Spangler of Iowa, present chairman, said there was still a good chance that he would be retained. Others believe the Cedar Rapids attorney who was named chairman in December, 1942, might be named head of the committee's Western headquarters for the coming campaign.

The customary post-convention meeting of the national committee today was only a brief one. Governor Dewey had been expected to attend, but Col. R. B. Creager, of Texas, who presided, announced Dewey's schedule was too heavy.

Hence a committee of six headed by Creager as ex-officio chairman was named to confer with the presidential candidate regarding the chairmanship. Other members are J. Russel Sprague, New York; Ezra R. Whitla, Idaho; Werner W. Schroder, Illinois; Mrs. Horace A. Sayre, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Katharine K. Brown, Ohio.

Session Called Today

Another session of the committee was called for tomorrow morning.

Tentative plans were made today to have the nominee confer some time after the Democratic convention, which opens July 19, with the other 25 Republican Governors. Gov. Dwight Griswold of Nebraska, said the State executives would attempt to arrange with Dewey a program to supplement in their States the work usually performed by the National Committeemen and State chairman. It was likely the plan would be presented to Dewey before he leaves Chicago.

Three Dog-Bite Cases Reported to Alexandria Police

Three cases of dog bites were reported by Alexandria police yesterday.

John Kelley of 9 West Myrtle st. told police he was bitten on the right leg when delivering papers.

A 65-year-old Negro, James Fletcher of 514 Gibbon st., reported that he was bitten on the shoulder. A small brown dog was reported to have bitten Edward M. Mack, Negro, of 509 North Henry st., while he was walking in the 400 block of Payne st.

Mrs. Dewey Will Eschew Radio, Writing

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey declared today that if she becomes mistress of the White House she hopes to lead a quiet life. Also she would have her 8 and 11-year-old sons keep their boyhood years "as nearly normal as possible."

Never having been inside the White House, she told a news conference, she would not attempt to specify what the role of the President's wife should be.

Smartly dressed in a gray faille suit with black accessories, the wife of the Republican presidential nominee was accompanied by her closest friend and neighbor, Mrs. Carl T. Hogan.

Mrs. Dewey said that if and when her husband makes any campaign tours she will accompany him.

Won't Commit Herself

She declined to commit herself on whether women should be given greater voice and greater opportunity of action in connection with governmental and international affairs, saying that individual women should do as they like.

Emphatically, she said she has no interest in doing any radio work, making speeches or writing for newspapers.

"I'd rather leave that to my husband," she said.

She said she has not decided whether as First Lady she might hold news conferences such as those instituted by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. However, contrary to the rule of Mrs. Roosevelt's conferences, Mrs. Dewey said if she held conferences she would admit men reporters as well as women.

Their young sons, she said, seemed most impressed with their father because he rated a big motorcycle escort here. That was what they wanted to hear about when she talked with them by long distance telephone, she said.

Thinks Mother Democrat

Replying to another question, Mrs. Dewey said that while her father, O. T. Hutt of Sapulpa, Okla., always had voted the Republican ticket, she thought her mother was a Democrat.

Asked whether she herself ever voted the Democratic ticket, Mrs. Dewey replied, "I never voted until I went to New York."

The former Frances Eileen Hutt met Dewey when they were studying music one summer here.

Mrs. Dewey said today that "sometimes—only at home" she still sings with her husband. Their sons "sing normally in the shower," she said. Both play the piano.

The boys weed the Deweys' victory garden at their Pawling, N. Y., farm, their mother said, adding that she does a little work in the garden.

Asked whether she disliked cooking, Mrs. Dewey laughed and said that while she hasn't cooked in a long time, she enjoys it when she does.

Marine Is Acquitted Of Manslaughter

Corpl. Ernest C. Musser, USMC, stationed at Kinston, N. C., yesterday and acquitted on charges of manslaughter by Judge Walter L. Green in Hyattsville Police Court. Judge Green imposed a fine of $50 for leaving the scene of an accident without rendering assistance.

Musser was held in connection with the death of Paris Burton, 45, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who was struck by an auto and fatally injured Saturday night in front of the Laurel, Md., diner in which he was employed.

Money Parley's Polyglot Train Leaving Today

A "Tower of Babel on Wheels," or the "Pullman Polyglot" are names suggested for the special train that will leave Washington this afternoon bearing the delegates of 44 nations to the Bretton Woods, N. H., United Nations monetary and financial conference.

Probably no train in this or any other country will have heard more languages spoken than the Pullman Polyglot. Language groups, in all of which money is an important word, will be divided about as follows:

English will be spoken by the Americans, British and Empire Dominions delegates; Spanish by by the Latin American delegates, except the Brazilians, who speak Portuguese.

In addition there are the Belgians, representatives of the French Committee of National Liberation, and the delegation from Luxembourg, who all speak French. Add to this Russian, Greek, Polish, Egyptian, Iran and Iraq forms of Arabic, Dutch spoken by the Netherlands delegation, Danish by the Icelanders, Norwegian, and Yugoslavian and some idea may be had of the diversified conversation due on the way to the White Mountains.

The train will be carefully isolated, its baggage cars sealed and guarded.

The State Department's chief press officer, Michael J. McDermott, has borne much of the burden of arranging the trip. There will be 300 official delegates, accompanied by an army of secretaries, stenographers, official translators and other assistants; 60 reporters and 100 State Department people.

McNutt Refuses To Give Police Access to Files

Commissioner John Russell Young said yesterday he had been advised by Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower chief, that the WMC will not furnish District police with information regarding persons on the agency rolls.

Young had asked McNutt to "take some action" to change the practice of his agency and of the U. S. Employment Service here, both of which are said to have denied access to their files to local law enforcement officers.

It was understood McNutt based his refusal on an agency policy of non-interference in regional matters.

A bill which would compel local WMC and USES officials to turn over confidential information to District policemen was introduced in the House last week by Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.). The measure was referred to the House District Committee and presumably will be taken up when Congress returns in August.

Two Acts to Extend War Powers Signed

The authority of President Roosevelt to requisition articles and materials needed by the United States for defense purposes and to requisition war materials was extended to June 20, 1945, in two bills which have been approved by the President.

The two laws granting the authority to the Executive would have expired today.

D. C. to Have Spectacular July 4 Show

What promises to be the most spectacular Independence Day celebration here since the war began will be staged on the Monument Grounds July 4 at 7:30 p. m., with a Marine Band concert, massing of the colors by 30 organizations, a program by several Hollywood stars and the first community fireworks display to be seen here since 1941. The celebration is to be known as Washington's Cavalcade of Freedom.

Officials of the local theater committee, representing the 42 movie houses where tickets for the show have been on sale to purchasers of war bonds, met last night with Hollywood representatives to work out last details. Names of the players appearing will be announced today.

The celebration will open with a concert by the Marine Band, under direction of Capt. William F Santelmann. At 8 p. m. the massing of the flags will take place. Then the movie stars will present numbers yet to be announced.

More than 100 piece of fireworks will be lighted, according to C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman of the committee. These will include the old favorite, "Spirit of '76," and a number of special sets, such as "The Battle of Coral Sea," "Our Solar System in Miniature," and set-pieces honoring President Roosevelt and General Eisenhower.

Officials predict an attendance of 150,000.

Ruhland Bids For School as Health Center

A second health center for the District seemed likely yesterday when Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer, announced that application has been made for use of Addison School as a nursing station, maternity and child welfare clinic.

"We have been trying to get the use of that building as a health center for some time," Ruhland said, following announcement that Addison will no longer be used as a school. "All we have to get now is the approval of the committee on space assignments and then we will establish standard health center services in the Georgetown building."

If the center is established, Ruhland said, its services will probably include venereal disease and tuberculosis treatment, prenatal and maternity care, and child welfare. The school building would serve as a residence for a staff of visiting nurses assigned to care for citizens of the community, he said.

At present, Ruhland explained, the only health center in the District is in the Southwest section, installed in a building designed and erected for that purpose. Funds and a site for another are available, the health officers said, but materials have as yet not been obtained for its construction.

"We would probably have to do some remodeling on the Addison School Building," Ruhland said, "but we would try to adapt our needs to the facilities available insofar as possible."

Railroads' Bond-buying Is Credited Locally

Waynesboro, Va., June 29 (Spl.). Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. has allocated $100,000 to Waynesboro in the Fifth War Loan, R. H. Clemmer, loan chairman, announced today. A like amount has been credited the Staunton and Augusta County drives by the company. Norfolk & Western Railway Co. recently allocated $70,000 to the local drive.

Wednesday of this week Waynesboro had $536,265.50 against a $750,000 quota for the Fifth War Loan.

Restaurant Price 'Freeze' To Cover U. S.

The "freeze" of restaurant prices now in effect in most parts of the country will be extended July 31 to virtually all of the Nation's public eating and drinking establishments, the Office of Price Administration announced last night.

In bringing additional areas under the regulation holding prices to levels of April 4-10, 1943, the agency also ordered these principal changes on a country-wide basis:

1. Five cents will be the top price any restaurant may charge for a cup or pot of hot coffee, including cream and sugar, unless it charged a higher price during the seven-day period, October 4-10, 1942.

2. April 4-10, 1943, base period ceiling prices must be posted by all eating and drinking establishments for 40 basic menu items served.

3. Higher prices than those of the base period may not be charged because of an increase in quantity or an improvement in quality.

In explaining the latter ruling, OPA said the "substitution of ingredients in any food item or beverage does not make it a new item and permit a higher price." It said the National Restaurant Industry Advisory Committee had "concurred in the view that it would be undesirable to permit these practices because of inflationary results."

Extension of the freeze provisions to the balance of the country brings under them for the first time the States of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, certain areas in Kansas, most of Oklahoma, two southern Ohio districts and a few parishes in Louisiana.

In making October 4-10, 1942, the base period for coffee ceilings, OPA said that was a normal period prior to the start of coffee rationing in November, 1942, and added: "Some establishments took advantage of the temporary shortage of coffee by raising their prices; when coffee became plentiful, they failed to reduce their prices to their normal levels."

Woodall Takes Office As District Governor

Chicago, Ill., June 29 (AP).—Raymond L. Woodall, manager of the Newport News (Va.) branch of the brokerage firm of Abbott, Proctor and Paine, today assumes office as governor of District 187, of Rotary International, it was announced from Rotary's headquarters here.

In addition to his other activities, Woodall is administrator of the Warwick County War Price and Rationing Board, and a past director of the Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.

Bible Quoted As Foretelling Hitler's Doom

"God decreed that Hitler would fail," the Rev. A. S. Maxwell told Seventh-day Adventists last night at the annual camp meeting of the Potomac Conference being held in Takoma Park.

Speaking on "Great Prophecies Being Fulfilled Today," the Rev. Mr. Maxwell, editor of Signs of the Times, a prophetic weekly publication of the denomination, said "today we are witnessing the most astounding fulfillment of the second chapter of Daniel."

In this prophecy of 2500 years ago, it declared that efforts would be made, he said, to reunite broken fragments of the Roman Empire but God declared "they shall not cleave one to another even as iron will not mix with miry clay."

Attempts Ending in Failure

"Today we see the most formidable attempt," the Rev. Mr. Maxwell asserted, "in all history by one man or nation ending in failure."

"From the Persians to the Germans—from Darius to Hitler," one conqueror after another bestrode the earth leaving behind a trail of blood and destruction. But they disppeared, he declared, and were forgotten in their failure to accomplish what God said could never be done.

"Now the latest of these is on the way out. His dreams of world conquest lie buried beneath the snows of Russia, on the mountainside of Italy and on the blood-soaked fields of Normandy," he stated.

God's Control Is Seen

Citing that this generation is beholding some of the most amazing fulfillments of Bible prophecy the world has ever seen, the Rev. Mr. Maxwell pointed out that "every thrilling development reminds us of God's leadership and control in the affairs of men."

Every headline, he emphasized, reaffirms Christ's declaration "Heaven and earth shall pass away but My word shall not pass way."

Delegates from the 58 churches in Washington, Virginia and western Maryland, yesterday unanimously followed the action of the General Conference, world headquarters of the church, in opposing the proposed so-called world calendar to begin in 1945. A resolution adopted by the group terms the calendar "antireligious to Catholics, Jews and Protestants."

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 29.—John L. Nadenbousch, this city, widely known among chicken fanciers and breeders in this area, has been named one of the judges for the New York Poultry Show to be held the last week in December, it was disclosed today. He has repeatedly exhibited chickens at the show himself and won numerous prizes.

D. C. Pal of Commando Kelly Keeps Mum on Own Exploits

"It was not bravery but a duty" that prompted Commando Kelly to slay 40 Germans single-handely at Cassino, according to Pvt. Harold F. Jones, jr., who was with Kelly from Salerno to Cassino and has returned to his home at 1364 Iris st. nw. Twenty-two-year-old Private Jones is on furlough after 14 months of overseas service for which he has been recommended for the Silver Star.

Unwilling to talk about his own exploits, Jones, who says that prayer brought him back, was glad to talk about the work of his buddies. Commando Kelly of Pittsburgh, he said, is a "typical fighter," and "there are many more like him." Inducted into the Army after two years at Georgetown University, Jones landed in Africa in April, 1943, with the Thirty-sixth Division. He was in the first wave to land at Salerno which he characterizes as "quite hard," and fought from the beachhead to Cassino.

A native of Washington and son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Jones, he is a graduate of Gonzaga High School. Incidentally, he said, it was cooler in Africa than it is here.

Among local men who participated in the Normandy offensive is Coastguardsman Thomas O. Savage, ship's cook second class, of 783 18th st. nw., serving with the Rescue Flotilla off the French coast on the cutter Cobra. The flotilla is credited with saving the lives of more than 750 men from the English Channel.

Another, Lieut. (j. g.) Floyd D. Cerf, jr., 31, whose wife, Mrs. Evelyn B. Cerf, lives at 1736 Kenyon st. nw., was a member of a Coast Guard crew in the American Assault Force which crossed the Channel to Normandy. Lieutenant Cerf had seen previous action in the Mediterranean.

Pharmacist's Mate, second class, Perry P. Stubbs, 28, has notified The Post that he, too, was in the continental action as a member of a naval crew. His wife, Mrs. Agnes E. Stubbs, lives at 1768 E st. ne.

Signalman, third class, Jack G. Clark, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Baker of 4017 Illinois ave. nw., also was a member of an assault naval crew Clark had seen action in Africa, Sicily, and Italy.

Still another Washingtonian who did his part in the French operation and saw his first action in the process, is Chief Pharmacist Mate USNR Joseph E. Sardo 3d, 30, a funeral director before the war. His wife, Mrs. Virginia Elizabeth Sardo, lives at 4028 Southern ave. se.

FWA Head Not Seen Unfit School Plans

Although informal conversations had been held between the Federal Works Agency and District officials about a proposed school near Parkside Dwellings in Northeast Washington, plans which the school board condemned as substandard at its meeting on Wednesday had never been seen by the agency, it was learned yesterday.

D. V. Auld, liaison man between FWA and the District, said the regional office apparently is governed by a new national policy to limit construction to $10,000 a room.

A. E. Heinmiller, school budget officer, said a letter from the regional office said no gym or auditorium could be included in the plans.

However, the actual plans condemned had been drawn up by the District's own architects in line with financial limitations indicated by the agency officials at informal meetings, according to Auld. He said he thought FWA and District school officials might be able to work out more satisfactory plans with the funds available.

According to Auld, the District has been granted six million dollars for building here since the war began. This amount included funds for building the Patterson School, for which funds had been allotted before the $10,000 per room limit was set.

WMC Reveals New Hiring Rules Today

By Adele Bernstein

The actual operating details of the new war manpower hiring controls will be announced today by Ernest V. Connolly, WMC director for Washington, and are expected to reassure the thousands of workers and employers in this area who fear complete loss of freedom after the program goes into effect Saturday.

It will be seen, for example, that the job-seeker has great latitude in choosing from jobs offered him by the U. S. Employment Service.

The purpose of the program, it has been pointed out both by Connolly and by Henry E. Treide, regional WMC director, is not to "regiment" a worker or employer, but simply to give any person looking for work the opportunity to find it in a critical industry or service, and the "essential" employer a chance to get a thoroughly qualified workman.

In order to best serve the war effort, as many men and women as possible will be routed by USES to essential jobs—those which must be filled if Washington is to continue to function as a vital war center.

No worker will be required to take any job paying less than the one he previously held, nor one which does not make best use of his skills.

A safeguard for the job seeker, announced yesterday, is that in applying for a position through a private employment agency, he need pay a fee only if the agency itself secures the job for him.

If in the process of clearing the referral with USES, the agency is told that another, more critical job should be filled by the applicant, the latter will have his fee refunded if he agrees to take the USES-offered job.

Meanwhile, meetings between WMC officials and employer and worker groups have continued all week, in order to explain the hiring controls and enlist thorough cooperation. The program has been indorsed by the principal labor unions, and, since it is planned to supply qualified workers where they are most needed, has been supported by leading utilities, transportation and other essential business establishments.

Meanwhile use of newspaper classified advertising to recruit workers is being specially recommended by Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower chief.

Under the extended manpower program, McNutt said that newspapers will again be able to perform a great service "by helping to direct the right workers to the right job at the right time." He urged employers to increase their use of ads after the priority referral of workers provision becomes effective Saturday.

Argentine and Germany Will Repatriate Diplomats

Plans for the exchange of Argentine and German diplomatic and other officials have been completed, Adrian Escobar, Argentine Ambassador here, announced yesterday.

Two ships—one Spanish and one Argentine — will leave Buenos Aires on July 6 and 12, the Ambassador said, carrying German diplomatic, consular and semi-official representatives to Lisbon, where the exchange will be effected under Portuguese supervision.

The exact number of Germans to be returned from Argentina is not known.

Safe conducts for the ships have been obtained from both the United States and British governments, Escobar said.

The repatriation is a result of Argentina's break with the Axis last January, Escobar said.

The Ambassador, referring to the Jewish population in Argentina, specifically denied "all versions presenting the Argentine government as anti-Semitic."

"There is no such thing as Argentine Christians and Argentine Jews, but solely Argentines, regardless of their origin, race and creed," Escobar declared.

Wac Charts Bolling Field Pilots' Routes

Six days a week from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m., Pfc. Helen K. Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Clark, 409 Baltimore rd., Rockville, keeps the Army pilots flying. She presides over the pilots' map and charting room at Bolling Field.

PFC. CLARK

Believed to be the only Wac in the Army Air Forces engaged in that type of work, Pfc. Clark with deft and sure strokes outlines projected routes of flight for pilots. Her completed work is the pilot's Bible, which tells him all he needs to know about the terrain over which he will be flying.

Training for such work began long before Pfc. Clark enlisted in the service. Following her graduation from the National Art School, Washington, she joined the Army Map Service where she made maps for the Army Engineering Corps. She is a lifelong resident of Rockville.

WMC Job Ruling Unpopular, Nation-Wide Survey Reveals

Princeton, N. J., June 24.—Although the American public has in public opinion surveys during the past two years accepted by a majority vote the principle of a civilian manpower draft, the majority today disapprove of the way Washington proposes to handle the manpower problem under the new ruling which goes into effect by Saturday, July 1.

This ruling attempts to relieve manpower shortages by regulating the employment of new persons by firms with more than eight on the payroll.

The present public reaction, as determined by a survey of all classes and groups of voters from coast to coast, is revealed in the responses to this question:

"After July 1 no employer hiring more than eight people can hire men between 18 and 65 without getting approval of the United States Employment Service. Do you approve or disapprove of this measure?"

APPROVE	33%
DISAPPROVE	53
NO OPINION	14

The adverse public reaction revealed in the above table indicates that the War Manpower Commission has an important selling job to do on the public to gain acceptance for the new ruling and to avoid difficulty in administering it.

Analysis of the reasons people give for disapproving of the measure shows that voters feel that "business and industry are already hamstrung by Government regulation," that "this regulation merely adds to the red tape," that "this just passes the buck to employers."

In past surveys an important element in the public's thinking has been the vital factor of need. Today's low vote ap approval is also undoubtedly a reflection of the public reaction to the successful invasion of the Continent, as well as increasing news of cuts or contemplated cuts in war production schedules.

The War Manpower Commission is thus presented with the problem of defending its method of handling the manpower problem and of convincing the public as to the present need for its new regulation.

Col. Richard Lee Transferred From Fort Belvoir to Texas

Col. Richard Lee, Corps of Engineers, post executive officer at Fort Belvoir, for the last three years, has been transferred from the Army Service Forces to the Army Ground Forces and assigned to duty at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., the War Department announced yesterday.

It will be his third station at the Texas post where he served with the Ninth Engineers (Mounted) in 1922, returning in the late 1920's for duty with the First Engineers. He had also served two tours of duty at Fort Belvoir, then Camp Humphreys, as a junior officer following World War I and he was graduated from the Engineer School there.

Colonel Lee returned to Fort Belvoir in July, 1940, as a major for assignment as executive plans and training officer for a regiment which was later sent to Iceland. He remained at the post and became executive officer at the main headquarters and commanding officer of the 1320th Service Unit, which later became the 2571st Service Unit, holding the posts from March 15, 1941, until his transfer last weekend.

A native Virginian and member of the Robert E. Lee family, the colonel was born at Rocky Mount June 14, 1899. He was graduated both from Virginia Military Institute at Lexington in 1916 and from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., in the shortened prewar course in November, 1918.

In addition to his service as an engineer officer, Colonel Lee is an experienced rider and was graduated from the Army's Cavalry School in 1924. He served as a cavalry instructor at Fort Riley, Kans., beginning in 1933 when he also commanded the Ninth Engineer Squadron.

Following the last war he was detailed for duty with the Engineer School in France, Belgium and Germany, and on succeeding assignments was with the Second Engineers at Corozal in the Canal Zone, and was assistant to the district engineers at Memphis, Tenn., Ocala, Fla., and Fort Peck, Mont.

Prince Georges To Inoculate Dogs Monday

Prince Georges County will begin free vaccination of dogs against rabies Monday at 46 locations. Owners are urged to take their dogs to the nearest station. The inoculations will be administered by veterinarians paid by the county. Vaccine is furnished by the State.

Dogs which have been inoculated will continue to be kept confined for 30 days, when they will be permitted to run at large provided they wear the special tag which will be issued to each vaccinated dog.

Unvaccinated dogs must be tied until the end of the quarantine period, now fixed for September 15.

County officials hope dog owners will respond to the offer and aid in the eradication of rabies. All loose dogs not wearing vaccination tags will be picked up by the dog catchers and taken to the county pound, subjecting owners to a $50 fine for violation of the quarantine.

Langley-McLean Area Opposes Radio Tower

Arlington, Fairfax Bureau of The Post. Arlington, Va Tel. CH. 3239.

Claiming that the proposed construction of a 250-foot radio transmitter tower as requested recently by the Blue Network would greatly reduce the value of their properties and desecrate the historical landmark Langley, residents of the Langley-McLean area are circulating a petition opposing the proposal, it was learned last night. It will be presented at the public hearing of the Fairfax County Zoning Appeals Board on Thursday, July 6, Fairfax Courthouse.

The property is zoned restricted residential, and the request of the Blue Network is in violation of the county zoning regulations for any commercial enterprise to be located there, the residents state and, if the petition is granted over their protest the matter will be taken before the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors and, if necessary, to the Fairfax Courts.

Red Steam Roller

Since the Red army's offensive in White Russia was launched just over a week ago, the German armies in that part of the Eastern Front have suffered a disaster which is rapidly approaching the dimensions of a catastrophe. One after another the great German strongpoints on the so-called Fatherland Line—Vitebsk, Zhlobin, Orsha, Mogilev—have been bowled over by the Russians who, without stopping to catch their breath, have driven relentlessly to the west.

By Thursday, advanced units of the Red army were within 35 miles of Minsk, the White Russian capital, which is on the highroad to Warsaw and Berlin. No signs of developing German resistance have appeared. On the contrary, some 22 German divisions face entrapment as the Russian pincers close around Minsk, five of these divisions already being completely surrounded at Bobruisk, the fall of which is expected momentarily. Yet Russia's summer drive is only in its opening stages. Moreover, as in the west, the Germans cannot be sure that the present offensive is intended to be the major one. They must be on guard against new Russian assaults—in the region south of the Pripet Marshes, in the Baltic area, and in the Balkans.

These possibilities make any large-scale shifts of German troops from one sector to another on the Eastern Front out of the question. On the other hand, the Russians, possessing the initiative, can do just that, and the recapture of the through line from Leningrad to Odessa (which runs through Vitebsk, Mogilev and Zhlobin) will make such shifts easier.

Vice President

The anxiety to get Governor Warren on the Republican ticket was due in great measure to the strategic place which his State will occupy in the Presidential election. Some observers go so far as to predict that California's electoral votes may decide the issue. But would Governor Warren have assured his State going Republican? Historically no such assumption is warranted. Events of a very recent vintage have demonstrated conclusively that key States or regions cannot be won by giving their favorite sons the nomination for the Vice Presidency.

In 1940 Mr. Roosevelt resisted the advice of many leaders in his own party to designate Henry A. Wallace as his nominee for Vice President. At once it was pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt, recognizing the strategic importance of the Middle West and the farm vote in general, wanted for his running mate the Secretary of Argiculture, who also was a native Iowan. As a matter of fact, Mr. Roosevelt, running with Henry Wallace, lost not only Iowa but a number of other big agricultural States where the farm vote was decisive. Mr. Wallace proved to have helped Mr. Roosevelt not a tittle in the very region where his influence was thought to be decisive.

Consider, also, the experience of Mr. Willkie. His running mate was the late Charles L. McNary, senior United States Senator from Oregon. This was considered a wise move not only as giving Mr. Willkie the Pacific seaboard but also as setting him right in an area where his private utility connections might have proved most damaging, for Senator McNary was known in the country as a champion of public ownership and the great Bonneville Dam. Yet Mr. Willkie did not carry any of the so-called public power States and even lost Oregon, where Senator McNary had been the dominant political figure for a quarter of a century. This was not in any sense a vote against Mr. McNary. For two years later—in the 1942 elections—he won a fifth consecutive term in the Senate by the largest margin ever accorded a political candidate in the history of his State. The election simply demonstrated that people vote for the candidate for first place on the ticket and that vice presidential considerations weigh very lightly in the average voter's choice.

If Mr. Wallace could not swing Iowa to President Roosevelt, and if Senator McNary could not swing Oregon to Willkie, it is hardly more likely that Governor Warren could have swung the State of California to Mr. Dewey. After all, Governor Warren is a relative newcomer to California politics. He has not nearly attained the traditional place which Senator McNary occupied in the public affairs of Oregon, nor has he the family name which Wallace long ago became in Iowa and the corn-belt. As California goes may go the Nation. But politieal history does not support the assumption that the nomination of California's Governor for Vice President would have determined which way California goes.

Labor Plank

The labor plank of the Republican platform indicates that the political activities of organized labor were not without influence upon the Republican platform drafters. Even though the CIO Political Action Committee practically threw away its chances of obtaining Republican support for its program by its recent indorsement of the President for a fourth term, the labor plank of the Republican platform indicates that the PAC's political efforts have borne fruit. For the Republicans have made some very handsome overtures to organized labor of a kind that cannot fail to appeal to CIO members, whether or not they choose to admit it. By their failure to attack the obviously vulnerable points of the Administration's wage policies, and their perversity in singling out for criticism WLB wage-freezing efforts that should be commended, the Republicans have played into the hands of those CIO labor leaders who are trying to tear down the system of wage controls and who appear to regard collective bargaining as a one-sided mechanism for extorting concessions from employers.

Instead of giving the CIO support in its campaign to boost wages and further unbalance the price structure, the labor plank should have emphasized the necessity of maintaining a firm control over wages during the war period. The Administration deserves to be criticized not for its attempts at wage stabilization, but rather for the pitiful inadequacy of its wage-stabilization policy. Moreover, instead of inveighing against the Administration's efforts to bind men to their jobs, the Republican platform should have recognized the inevitability of a labor draft in wartime and directed its attack against the fumbling and ineffective attempts of the WMC to do a proper job of mobilization.

The implication that the New Deal seeks by executive decrees and deliberate perversion of the clear intention of labor laws, such as the Wagner Act, to establish a dictatorship over labor and industry is not calculated to win any labor votes. For the Administration has been "soft" so far as labor is concerned. It is industry that has been subjected to the pressure of executive edicts. The major source of the difficulty lies in the ambiguities and the inadequacies of existing labor laws. The call should be for revision of labor laws and more impartial and conservative use of the executive powers exercised under these laws. Such demands might not be popular with the type of labor leader who concentrates his attention upon enlarging the powers and increasing the privileges of organized labor while remaining indifferent to labor's responsibilities. But the great body of Americans would undoubtedly respond enthusiastically to appeals for a forthright, even-handed administration of collective bargaining and firm enforcement of antistrike legislation. By plugging loopholes in existing laws and providing more adequate enforcement weapons, Congress would deprive the Administration of excuse for reliance upon executive edicts to effectuate the assumed purpose of existing labor laws.

Finally, though there is crying need for closer coordination between the various Government agencies engaged in handling labor relations, the Republican recommendation that all these agencies should be brought together in the Department of Labor under a head representatifve of labor is singularly ill-advised. Our labor policies, like all other policies, should be administered by representatives of the public, not by representatives of a particular class or group within the community. We have had occasion already to discover how difficult it is to obtain impartial handling of labor disputes by the labor and the industry members of the WLB, even in great wartime crises. Spokesmen for organized labor should be afforded every facility for bringing their demands to public attention and urging their claims for consideration upon political parties. By such means the voters in a democracy are informed of the public issues calling for action, and through their party organizations they are able to work for attainment of such aims as seem to them to be justified. But political statesmanship requires that the legitimacy of demands be appraised and promises be made with a view to what is practicable and in the public interest. The Republican labor plank shows no signs of having been the product of any such dispassionate balanced judgment.

$64 Question

Norman Thomas asks Secretary Hull, "Even if there had been no . . . attack upon us, was the Administration planning a military offensive against Japan at a time of its own choice?" Unfortunately, it was not. Had it been planning such an offensive and had it embarked upon it prior to Pearl Harbor, a great many million human lives might have been spared—Chinese and Japanese and Filipino lives, as well as American. We would not have found ourselves in such a tight squeeze for tin, rubber and other products of Indonesia. But the Administration was so beset by men like Norman Thomas, who wrote books and made speeches to prove that the events in Asia and Europe were none of our concern, that it was slow in planning even an adequate defense. When it advocated even the most elementary measures of security, Mr. Thomas accused it of warmongering.

No, the Administration, so far from planning an attack on Japan, was appeasing that country and allowing its aggression in China to go unchecked until dangerously late in the day. So defensive was the Administration's and the country's psychology, indeed, that when war came upon us the primary motive behind our response to it was simply survival. This is the answer to Mr. Thomas' second query as to whether our motive in entering the war before being attacked would "primarily have been (a) to forestall future Japanese designs against us, (b) to uphold white imperialism in Asia, or (c) to defend China against cruel aggression?"

We do not know the answer to Mr. Thomas' third question, "Whatever may have been true in the past, is the Administration now committed to opposition to all imperialism in Asia or only to Japanese imperialism?" The question goes right to the heart of our relations with our Allies. It weighs heavily on American minds. But it is not a question which can be answered easily. And it is not improper that the answer to it should be tempered in some measure by a regard for the interests and sentiments of those Allies. We do not seek a falling out among friends. Mr. Thomas speaks of "opposition to all imperialism." We cannot help wondering how far he would have such opposition go and whether he would not look upon all expressions of it as a form of warmongering. The time has come for constructive ideas which we can proffer in world councils.

Au Clare de Luce

The exordium of Representative Clare Boothe Luce's address before the Republican National Convention Tuesday evening was mainly devoted to proving that in the more elementary matters of politics, women are not different from men. "They feel no differently about the ever-growing threats to good government" or about "inefficiency, abusiveness, evasion, self-seeking and personal whim" or about "pressing this war to the enemy's innermost gates," and so on. Indeed, up to the point where she got around to bidding for blue star and gold star votes, it seemed that Mrs. Luce had, like Lady Macbeth, called upon the spirits to "unsex me here"—tour de force as that might seem.

And yet Mrs. Luce's speech is itself evidence that there are fields in which the feminine psychology operates somewhat differently from the masculine. An experienced male politician attempting the same sort of oration might haye introduced a certain slightly self-conscious, half-sheepish note into it, a sort of oh-well-you-know-what-convention-oratory-has-to-be inflection. But Mrs. Luce never once departed from a tone of high moral earnestness. Moreover, she was much more careful of—er, shall we say, Luce ends?—than many men might have been. She was rather like the thrifty housewife who saves old linen for bandages and odd bits of chiffon and crepe de Chine for patchwork quilts.

There was, to be sure, a rather hair-raising moment when Mrs. Luce seemed to chuck the whole traditionist vote overboard by an apparently indiscreet quotation from Ibsen about "the man of the future," but she snatched it right back a few minutes later by quoting Archbishop Spellman. Similarly, she made her rather funereal argument, that Republicans, having been so long out of power, cannot be to blame for anything, furnish forth the tables for the coming nuptials of Republicanism and the Electorate.

Mrs. Luce, having thus proved herself all things to all men in the best Pauline tradition, it is not perhaps surprising that the delegates, with one accord and with apparently unfeigned and spontaneous heartiness, arose to serenade her with, "Let me call you 'Sweetheart'; I'm in love with you." Incidentally, the stadium organist introduced Mrs. Luce with the theme of "Boola, Boola." Although she is well known to be a Representative from Connecticut, the association seemed a little tenuous until it was remembered that in her semiprivate capacity Mrs. Luce is the wife of the influential publisher of Life, Time and Fortune, who is among the more distinguished products of Yale University. All in all, we should say that Mrs. Luce gave very artistic and effective expression to the conviction, which we suspect to be universal among her sex, that men are after all nothing more than little boys imperfectly grown up.

NOTE FROM AFAR

In a far New England spring
The rich hour comes,
Hour of lilac, young leaves,
Flower-petal drums.

I, far from there, hear it
Sound in my own blood cells.
By old stone tumbled down,
The stroong earth tells

That today the shoots break
Airward through the crust . . .
And winter's long drift breached,
The new blades thrust.

And in a warm wave
Migratory birds float
Northward, northward by night,
Wing's whir, a stray note.

And I, I do not see it!
Why did they put me by
Far from the lilac-bursts
And the spring's rain-sky?

Republican Strategy

By Ernest Lindley

Domestic Issues

The main lines of Republican strategy for the 1944 Presidential campaign have been confirmed by the platform adopted at Chicago and by Governor Dewey's acceptance speech.

The Republicans wish to cancel as issues (1) the military conduct of the war and (2) the organization of the peace. They wish to concentrate their fire on the domestic policies of the Roosevelt Administration. The phrase "domestic policies" is very broad. It includes the numerous social reforms of the New Deal, its prewar antidepression program, and the management of the domestic economy during the war.

I WILL DEAL in a later column with the organization of the peace and the domestic policies of the Republican Party, as outlined at Chicago. But it should be noted that neither the platform nor Dewey's speech affirmed the need for special wartime controls of the economy. On the contrary, the platform is directly and specifically antagonistic to these controls. It embodies appeals to the special pressure groups which if they have their way would cause a serious inflation. They include a direct attack on the "freezing" of workers in jobs, which almost certainly is an essential mechanism in maintaining efficient war production. In subsequent speeches, Dewey may elaborate his views on wartime controls. But the Republican platform reveals no comprehension either of the problems of organizing the Nation for war or of preventing inflation. Like the record of a majority of the Republican members of Congress during the war, it is cut to appeal to narrow economic interests, represented by strong pressure groups rather than to protect the national welfare and promote the efficient conduct of the war. The platform and Dewey agree on the prosecution of the war until victory has been won over both enemies. Dewey, to his credit, put more emphasis on complete victory and less than some of the other convention speakers on getting the boys back home as soon as possible. He also lauded General Marshall and Admiral King and declared categorically that a change in administration will not involve any change in the military conduct of the war.

GENERAL MARSHALL and Admiral King deserve the praise which they received. It is reassuring to know that Dewey does not indorse the views of those who earlier advocated that General MacArthur should be put in charge or who insisted that the defeat of Japan should be put ahead of the defeat of Germany. Admittedly, it is a little bit late now to change the grand strategy of the Allies, and the brilliant prosecution of the Pacific war simultaneously with the invasion of Europe has abashed those who were preoccupied with the war against Japan to the exclusion of the war against Germany. Nevertheless, Dewey completely disassociates himself from that school of thought.

In indorsing the military conduct of the war, however, he necessarily pays a very high tribute to the President. In the first place, General Marshall and Admiral King were chosen by Roosevelt. Neither was an automatic appointment recommended by seniority. They were both hand-picked. Marshall, only a brigadier general when he was named Chief of Staff in 1939, was jumped over the heads of all the major generals in the Army and the senior brigadier generals.

In the second place, the American Chiefs of Staff cannot dictate the strategy of the war. For this is a coalition war. The cementing of the coalition was Roosevelt's task. When differences of opinion arose between the American and British Chiefs of Staff, as they did at times, they had to be settled by Roosevelt and Churchill. The arrangements which have kept China in the war and which, at Teheran, assured that the Russians would fight until Germany had been defeated and achieved the coordination of Russian and Allied war plans for 1943, were not, and almost certainly could not have been made by our professional military men alone.

In the conduct of a great war, military affairs are intertwined with international politics and diplomacy. The coordination of all these activities to achieve victory and hold it can be achieved only by the head of the Government. This is not, as Dewey implies, civilian "intervention" in the military conduct of the war. His use of the word might in itself be taken as an indication that he does not grasp the nature of war or the duties of the President. Possibly in later speeches he will correct this impression. What he said about Marshall and King was reassuring, as far as it went.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Regional Rivalry And The Campaign

CHICAGO—AT THE LAST minute something went wrong with the stage management of the Republican convention that has just ended, but somehow the very fact that it didn't go through on perfect schedule gave the show a human touch it lacked before.

CHILDS

The truth is that "Honest John" Bricker had more real popularity with the rank and file delegates than any other Republican leader, and that goes for the man who was named to first place on the ticket. For the grassroots delegate who has stayed loyal to the party through good years and bad, Bricker comes nearer to the old-fashioned standards of Republicanism than Dewey, who seems a little too smooth—a slick Easterner.

Bricker is regular, particularly by contrast with Governor Warren, whose delayed action method of taking himself out of the running for the Vice Presidency left a bad taste with delegates now dispersing to their homes. For one thing, it presented Dewey with an embarrassing background against which to accept the "draft." The Californian spoke of his "unfulfilled obligation," although he had given no such firm pledge to stay in the Governorship as did the New Yorker when he ran for Governor in New York State two years ago.

WHAT IS HARD to understand, given the effectiveness of the Dewey managers, is why the Warren withdrawal was not better handled. Warren's press conference the day he arrived was surely the logical time to make perfectly clear that he would under no circumstances be the vice presidential candidate.

There were plenty of reasons why Governor Warren shouldn't have wanted it. Publicly he will express nothing about his fears as to the difficulties his party will encounter, the principal one being the CIO's Political Action Committee, which is now hard at work registering and organizing the thousands of workers who have come to work in California's war plants.

Quite apart, however, from immediate practical considerations, Warren had a more compelling reason. A new industrial empire has been created on the West Coast by the war.

The question now is what is to happen to it. Powerful Eastern interests are afraid of the competition California will offer when the war ends. They would like to liquidate some of this competition.

Deep regional rivalries enter in. If Warren stays on as Governor for the next two years he has a chance to assert leadership in this new empire, fighting to keep the advantage gained through the war. Winning or losing as Vice President, he would throw away that opportunity.

THIS REGIONAL rivalry will figure in the campaign. You can hear at the grassroots a stirring of resentment against "the East" and its alleged financial and political dominations. It figures in Colonel McCormick's editorials. It partly motivates the rabble-rousing fanatics with their hymns of hate. And, make no mistake, this same resentment runs in more orthodox political channels.

You can hear it among the delegates who wanted Bricker instead of Dewey. In the campaign it will be one of Dewey's handicaps. The New Deal is accumulating ammunition to show that as Governor of New York Dewey worked to keep freight rates discriminatory against the Middle West and the South; the freight rates which have helped to make Eastern industrial domination possible.

Bricker in the months to come will keep the standpat Republicans happy, while Dewey will address himself to the independent voter. The Ohioan knows the "applause" words that touch off the regulars. As he told the delegates, he's been going around the country "preaching the gospel of Americanism" and that's what he'll keep on doing.

All the minor arrangements were perfect. The standards with Dewey's picture were delivered on the dot and ready for the demonstrating delegates.

For a moment the beginnings of a "We want Bricker" cry came from the floor.

But "Honest John" stood in the stabbing lights and swallowed hard, taking his medicine like a regular and going all-out for Dewey.

Texas Election

In view of your interest in the subject of the Texas election, I think I should now make a statement which you are at liberty to publish.

The following quotation from a written statement I made on June 12, 1944, to my chief, Justice Byrnes, about the Texas election matter should make clear my position:

"The linking of my name with recent political developments in Texas disturbs me because it may be embarrassing to you.

"I not only had no part in these proceedings, I knew nothing whatever about the matter until I read of it in the newspapers.

"Moreover, I do not approve of actions intended to deny the qualified voters of any State of an opportunity to vote for the nominees of their party."

There is one statement in this morning's editorial which I feel that I should correct. It is true that I completely dissociated myself from Anderson, Clayton & Co. in the summer of 1940 when I entered Government service; in fact, I have not been in the State of Texas since March, 1941. I did not, however, liquidate my stock in the company. W. L. CLAYTON.

Reactionary Caste

The Revolting South, as presented by Miss Annie Belle Mingledorff appears to be, sir, worthy of the same, sir. Let's have some plain talk on the subject unencumbered by mint julep leaves and magnolia blossoms.

Once before the South, for reasons very similar to those expounded by Miss Mingledorff, sought to dissolve the Union. A Civil War was fought; the South lost but never forgot. Voting as a solid bloc since that time, the South has sent its representatives back to Congress time after time until, through seniority, the South's representatives have come to head the most important of the congressional committees. In this manner the South has come to wield power all out of proportion to its position in the Nation either culturally or economically.

The Southern Democrats have already become the center party, working, on the record, with the forces of reaction in both parties. Not satisfied with this very comfortable pivotal spot, the more rabid of the South's representatives have engineered an insidious revolt designed to thwart the popular will of a South not solid enough for their reactionary tastes. This is not a plot of the plain people; it is the creation of the oligarchic caste which the South, through unintelligent voting, has spawned, a cancerous growth which the South must eliminate lest it throw the Nation into disunion at a moment when Union counts most.

Unwritten Constitution

Mr. Lippmann, in The Post of June 24, contends that we have an unwritten Constitution as well as the written one. Possibly he thinks that the English ought not to be allowed to have any good thing that we Americans cannot have too. However that may be, he overlooks the most material element of the present political campaign for which an unwritten constitution, if there be one, would provide a remedy. I refer, of course, to the traditional limitation of the Presidency to two terms.

Three terms have already enabled a President to model the personnel of a coordinate governmental branch, the Supreme Court, to his liking. It has also given him a free hand in building up his own coordinate branch, in its personnel, to proportions unconceived of heretofore. This has left the remaining coordinate branch, the Congress, not much more than a benignant uncle who supplies the ready money—and also a considerable amount of the unready. Even the uncle's own children have been so dressed up in garments of the latest style, by others, that he does not recognize them as his own—as they appear in the recent fire insurance companies decision. And this uncle has been so dizzied and dazzled by the bureaucrats and economists (a name suggestive of "economy," which I would like to protest against now that they take billions so casually) that he has gone away for the summer to recover his sense of reality, perhaps.

No, Mr. Lippmann, I fear that we have no unwritten Constitution, and that what you have mistaken for one refers only to the interpretations of the written one which the courts make.

ARTHUR RICHMOND.

Slogans And Jargon

This is to congratulate you on your editorial of June 27, "Lesson in Semantics." I wish more newspapers would use their editorial pages to discuss in such intelligent and detached fashion the meaning or lack of meaning of political slogans. Mr. David E. Lilienthal, in the speech you quote, mentioned four of those dangerous, vague abstractions: "Free enterprise," "collectivism," "reactionary" and "radical." I am sure you agree with me that many more could and should be made the subject of a "lesson in semantics": "Bureaucracy," for instance, or "liberal," "Fascist," "plannning," "empire," "sovereignty" . . . The list is endless.

I am sincerely looking forward to reading more of your editorials in this vein. In the meantime, I keep your "Lesson in Semantics" handy as an antidote to 1944 campaign speeches.

Russ, Not Red

I am employed at a newstand at Connecticut ave. and L st. For the past three months I have consulted with men on many corners.

I have found out that all the Russians in Washington resent having their army called the "Red" Army.

Speak to "Mike" the doorman at the Mayflower. He is very emphatic on this subject. "Russ" would be better, and require only one more letter. HARRY F. DILLON.

Hitler's Purge

By Paul Winkler

Tenth Anniversary

Adolf Hitler has always been anniversary conscious. One of his most important anniversaries is recurring now—June 30, the date on which, in 1934, 10 years ago, he conducted the blood purge in which he had some of his oldest and most faithful followers assassinated.

It was only on June 30, 1934, a year and a half after he came to power, that Hitler can be said to have seated himself solidly in the saddle in Germany. It was with the bloody attack on his own men that he paid for the complete backing of the influences which for generations had been the powers behind the throne in Germany and Prussia: the army, the heavy industrialists and the Junkers. From that day forward, all his energies were devoted to carrying out the Pan-Germanic program for which they stood—which, for Hitler, had supplanted the original 25-point platform of the Nazi Party.

Rumors of Resignation

Last year, a few weeks before January 30, the tenth anniversary of Hitler's assumption of the chancellorship, strange, planted rumors seeped out of neutral European capitals. They were to the effect that Hitler might pick this anniversary to announce his resignation. That resignation, this story went on, was being forced by the generals and the industrialists. The purpose of this report seemed to have been to discover if the Allies would be likely to accept Hitler as a scapegoat and to permit the continued power in Germany of the men who had hidden behind him.

The ruse, if ruse it was, did not work, and Hitler's anticipated resignation did not occur. Might the same comedy be played again in connection with this new tenth anniversary? Last year the approach of the crucial date was preceded by a retirement of Hitler from the limelight. This year we are being told once again that he seems to have disappeared from the active direction of affairs. By now democratic leaders must realize that the men and the powers behind Hitler are more dangerous even than he is, and that to allow them to save themselves and to continue to direct German policy in exchange for their sacrifice of Hitler would be equivalent to losing the war.

What Happened in 1934

Up to 1934 the Nazi movement still maintained its revolutionary aspect, and might have moved to the left quite as readily as to the right. Hitler had reached power by playing two more or less opposed elements in Germany against one another, but he had not yet achieved full control of the government because the more powerful element, the Rightists, were not yet sure that Hitler could be trusted.

His popular strength had been built up by demagogic attacks not only against the Jews but also against the industrialists and the big landowners, and as a result a large section of his party was of revolutionary tendencies.

The large following which he had acquired by these means had made it necessary for even the industrialists and the Junker landowners to take his movement into account. But they feared that if he took power he might actually put into effect the theories with which he had won the masses. In order to become Chancellor, Hitler had to convince these dominating circles that he actually intended to emphasize the word "national" and bury the word "socialist."

Accord With Right

The first stage of convincing them of what occurred on January 4, 1933, when Hitler concluded an agreement with the magnates of the Ruhr at the home in Cologne of Baron Kurt von Schroeder, banker of the German Steel Trust. Franz von Papen and Werner von Alvensleben represented the Junkers at this meeting.

But the reactionary forces who had put Hitler in office were still not completely reassured—particularly as they could observe that Hitler's left wing followers were of the opinion that their leader had succeeded in pulling the wool over the eyes of the right. Capt. Ernst Roehm and his SA storm troopers were particularly certain of this. The SA was a formidable force—Roehm boasted after Hitler came to power that he had increased its membership from 600,000 to 3,000,000, and he and his lieutenants began to make speeches about the "second revolution" which their organization was going to carry out.

Hitler's reactionary backers began to be worried. Whether Hitler had allied himself with them in good faith or not, they began to wonder whether he could control the Leftist element in his own party. The army also became alarmed. Instead of letting the army run the SA, Roehm wanted the SA to run the army. He intended to infiltrate the Reichswehr with his own men and take over control of it.

On June 30, 1934, Hitler convinced his influential backers finally of his fidelity by simply massacring the leaders of the revolutionary element in the National Socialist Party, including Roehm and many others of his oldest and most devoted followers. The industrialists and the Junkers were satisfied. Hitler had proved himself their man.

Rosel H. Hyde Groomed For GOP Post in FCC

GOSSIP: That Rosel H. Hyde has the inside track for the GOP vacancy on the Federal Communications Commission. His name has been recommended to the President, and now a check is being made to determine how good a Republican he is. Hyde joined FCC in 1928 and worked his way through several clerical jobs to the legal division, and now is assistant general counsel in charge of broadcasting. His legal residence is Idaho. . . . That the Roosevelts don't believe they'll have to move out of the White House on January 1. A sun deck is being constructed on the Nation's No. 1 residence and Mrs. Roosevelt is supervising the job. . . . That officials of the Petroleum Administration for War suspect that the real reason why the Nazi air force hasn't shown up in strength since our liberation drive is its shortage of high octane gas.

PENTAGON STORY: A young girl went to the world's largest office building to make application for a summer job. Eventually she was directed to an interviewer in the personnel office. During the conference another employe came in to go over some rush matters with the interviewer, and so the schoolgirl was asked to wait on the outside for a few moments. She agreed and left the office. Ten minutes later the interviewer looked on the outside but she couldn't find the young girl. She looked in all the obvious nearby places without success. The interviewer forgot about the incident, believing the girl had decided she didn't want to work after all. Late that evening she got a call from a guard who reported a strange young girl was wandering about the building. The student greeted the interviewer with: "You told me to wait on the outside, didn't you?" P. S.—The girl didn't get the job.

War Relocation Authority has lost its able executive officer, Leland Barrows, who got himself a lieutenant's commission in the Coast Guard . . . It now appears that the Nye-Stambaugh race in North Dakota will be settled by the soldiers' vote. About 4000 absentee ballots are to be counted . . . A Liberty ship today will be christened at Baltimore in memory of William Hodson, who died in a plane crash en route to North Africa to handle relief. Hodson's widow now is employed at United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation . . . The Office of Censorship, and not Federal Trade, will give a $50 war bond to the employe who sells the most bonds during the Fifth Loan drive . . . The GOP platform calls for a return of the Employment Service to the States as soon as possible. The Murray bill on reconversion would keep the service federalized for two years after the war . . . Soil Conservation Chief H. H. Bennett is off on a two-month trip to South Africa.

Something important to every Federal worker took place yesterday before the District Court here. The validity of the Hatch Act, which protects employes from the politicians and prevents them from playing politics was argued before a three-judge panel composed of Chief Justice Groner and Judges Bailey and Morris. The case against the act was argued by Lee Pressman, general counsel of the CIO, on behalf of the United Federal Workers of America, the CIO white-collar union of Government people. He contended that that part of the law which prohibits employes from speaking or making a motion in a political meeting, from writing letters or articles for publication on political subjects and candidates and from soliciting votes on their own time among their neighbors violates the constitutional guarantees of free speech and free press. Pressman agreed that Congress had the power to limit these activities to prevent evils and abuses.

Joseph M. Friedman of the Justice Department, represented the Government and he argued that the Civil Service Commission did not have full authority to dismiss employes, except its own, and that Section 1 of the act was, in fact, more liberal than the former Civil Service rule. He explained that fromerly employes were forbidden from expressing their opinions on political matters and candidates. He took the view that the Government had full authority to lay dwon rules under which its employes were to work and that the Government compelled no one to work for it. The UFWA lawyers said that normal political activity is necessary to a healthy democracy and is not something the Congress can prevent. The judges took the case under advisement.

Federal Housing is the first Federal agency to go over its war bond quota, departmental and field . . . UNRRA has borrowed Marion Ray from the Civil Service Commission to go to New York to recruit new employes . . . Navy is moving offices of the Bureau of Ships and Medicine and Surgery to the stuffy temporary buildings near the National Guard Armory. And incidentally, many of the men in the temporary buildings have become sensible after a day or so of this intense heat, and they're now wearing cool slacks to work. But pity the poor naval officers who must wear their coats for some silly reason! The Army, which allows its officers to wear shirts, is much more sensible. Ask any Navy man.

Ferry Strike Arbitrator Is Awaited

Norfolk, Va., June 29 (AP).—An arbitrator from the War Labor Board was expected to fly to Norfolk from Washington today to attempt to settle a strike called Wednesday by unlicensed personnel of the Chesapeake Ferry Co.

The strikers, nonunion Negro employes, are seeking a $5 a week increase in pay. Pending arrival of the WLB representative, the strike was continuing with all boats between Newport News and the naval base in Norfolk tied up.

On May 19 the same employes as are now on strike called a six-hour walkout which temporarily disrupted traffic. The strike was ended when the employes agreed to allow the WLB two weeks in which to decide whether or not the company should be allowed to grant the increase.

No Arbitrator Sent

No arbitrator was sent, however, and early yesterday morning the strike was resumed. Arthur Hitch, president of the company, has said that the increase will be paid if the WLB allows it, but that it cannot be paid without the WLB's permission. He has asked the strikers to return to work pending settlement of the dispute.

Five boats on the Norfolk-Newport News run are tied up by approximately 25 strikers. The ferries operating between Willoughby and Old Point have not been tied up by the strike.

Recognition Issue

Cumberland, Md., June 29 (AP).—A hearing before a War Labor Board panel to determine if employes of the Cumberland plant of the Celaense Corp. of America, as represented by Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, may receive a wage increase has been recessed until July 12, Richard E. Boyden, union president, and Fred T. Small, plant manager, announced today.

The company requested the postponement for time to study the lengthy brief submitted by the union.

The case, which concerns only wages, is technical in nature. The union is seeking an 17-cent an hour increase along with wage adjustments, pay for holidays not worked, and a revision in the step-up rate. The union contends the demands are justified in face of the increased cost of living.

Small said the company has met requirements under the Little Steel formula.

Work Stoppage Continues

Baltimore, June 29 (AP).—About 150 employes of the Rheem Manufacturing Co., Sparrows Point, Md., remained today away from work for the fourth successive day in protest of a 10-hour working schedule which they have asked to be converted into a 48-hour week with overtime on a voluntary basis.

Albert Atallah, director of District 8, CIO Steel Workers, said that union officers and labor committees met last night to discuss the issue and a War Labor Board order that "all steps necessary" be taken "to resume full and continuous production at once."

The district director reported, however, that not enough of the workers attended the meeting to justify any definite action and efforts would be made today to get the strikers together and "try to impress them" with the requests of "various agencies" including the WLB and union groups.

Emergency Fund Reduced To $185,798

Annapolis, Md., June 29 (AP).—State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes reported today that Maryland's war emergency fund of $500,000 has been reduced to $185,798 during the past fiscal year which ends officially at midnight tomorrow, June 30.

He said that the postwar construction fund of two million dollars which was established by the 1943 Legislature stands today at $1,958,115 and the general emergency fund of $500,000 as of today, totals $358,840.

Tawes explained that final figures on expenditures during the 1944 fiscal year will not be available until the middle of July when complete reports are received from all State departments and agencies. Any allocated funds from those emergency funds which were unspent will return to the emergency fund from which they were taken, he added.

The chief item on the war emergency fund expeditures was that of $172,800 for the Maryland State Guard and $52,000 for the State Minute Men. War damage insurance taken out by the State amounted to $28,808, Tawes said.

Other expenditures from this fund since July 1, 1943, included $24,961 to the Military Police Battalion of the State Guard; $36,406 to the Maryland Council of Defense and $700 to the Veterans' Advisory Committee.

Berkeley County's 1st Tornado Struck in May, 1889, Killing 2

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 29 (Spl.).—The devastating tornado which struck the central section of West Virginia Friday night recalled to older residents here that Berkeley County once had a similar twister which caused two deaths and injured several other persons.

The funnel-shaped phenomenon hit the Falling Waters section on May 30, 1889. The only building in its path, which was about one-half mile north of the village, was a wagon shed on the old John Criswell farm. Several men were working in a cistern at the time, and when they heard the storm approaching they ran into the shed which was soon swept away, killing two of them, one a man named Powell. It was believed that if they had stayed in the cistern they would have been safe.

Because only the one shed was hit, damage was only about $3000, including the destruction of crops in fields in the path. The storm came up the Potomac River and crossed it, going north.

Four tornadoes have been recorded in West Virginia, including the one of last week and the one at Falling Waters, S. S. Schworm, in charge of the United States Weather Bureau station at Parkersburg, said.

The one at Falling Waters was the first and only other one in which lives were lost. The other two were at Parkersburg on July 22, 1907, and at Morgantown on May 2, 1929. In the latter storm 38 homes were destroyed and damage was estimated at $500,000.

25,494 Tires Allotted Md. During July

Baltimore, June 29 (AP).—Maryland's war price and rationing boards have been allotted 25,494 tires for July, the State Office of Price Administration disclosed today.

The figure represents an increase of 3343 over the number allocated as the basic quota for June.

All motorists with B or C rations are eligible for new tire certificates but officials said the number of applications have far exceeded the number of tires available.

Certificates are being issued on the basis of "essentialty," OPA officials said. They also reported that more than 25 stations have had their tire-inspection licenses suspended.

Suspensions were made because OPA officials declared that the stations were issuing certificates that motorists needed new tires when such was not the case.

Carroll Farmer Sued for Passing Wheat Allotment

Baltimore, June 29 (AP).—The United States Government filed suit in Federal Court today against a Carroll County farmer charged with raising an excess quantity of wheat in 1941 over and above the amount he was allowed to grow.

Harry Munshower of Taneytown, was named defendant in the case. He was said to have raised and marketed an excess of 128½ bushels of wheat over what he had been allowed in the wheat marketing program.

Robert Garrett, executor of his great-aunt's estate, had petitioned for court sanction of use of the fund for development of a public recreation area.

"The over-all and individual quotas have been exceeded handsomely already," Lowndes said. "However, included in that individual quota is a quota of $49,000,000 in series E bonds, the people's bond, and this $49,000,000 goal is our major objective now."

Fire Chief Roland Snyder here said he was advised yesterday. It will be limited to a single day's session, and all but business and memorial sessions will be eliminated.

Snyder also announced the annual school for firemen will be held in Morgantown, W. Va., at the university in July, the exact date not yet set.

Yanks Blank Browns, 1-0, for Sixth Straight

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Three more big league teams are beginning to see the light, and want more of it. When the major league brass hats meet at Pittsburgh on July 11 to vote on league affairs before the All-Star game, the St. Louis Cardinals, the White Sox and the Browns will petition for permission to play more night games.

POVICH

The Cardinals, eyeing the Griffith Stadium attendance figures somewhat covetously, want to play all of their remaining home games at night except on Sunday, a la the Nats. The Browns and White Sox want an increase in night dates. As we were saying, the club owners can read the signs—the dollar signs.

For the second time in two years, you'll notice that the annual All-Star game has been scheduled at night. The reason was simple enough: The leagues were afraid they couldn't fill the ball parks at Philadelphia last year and at Pittsburgh next month if the games were played in the afternoon. At night, capacity crowds are assured.

Night baseball is not only here to stay, but weekday afternoon games are gone cookies. The club owners are in no mood to make light of those hefty gate receipts at night. Washington, with perhaps the smallest population in the American League, will probably lead the league in home attendance this year. Those 42 night games, which have been averaging 10,000 crowds, are the answer. Griffith beat down all objection to his requests for unlimited night games by the weight of the checks that represented the visiting teams' share of the gate.

Club owners admit that it might be very embarrassing if both St. Louis clubs won the pennants this year and the majors attempted to stick to the old formula of playing the World Series in the daytime. That the park would be half empty is virtually certain, and the World Series would lose face. Already there is agitation for a complete nighttime World Series if it should come to pass that it is to be played in St. Louis, a bad baseball town.

Some club owners are a-feared that the success of night baseball is is only temporary and chant that "the novelty will wear off and baseball again will become a day game." But there are others who are still fascinated by the novelty of big gate receipts and hope it never wears off.

As for the customers, there is no uncertainty as to where there preference lies, and it is for night ball. That's the only time they can see a ball game, except for the leisure class. At least until another depression arrives, and it's fairly certain that even the day-ball die-hards would prefer night games to another depression night away.

One of the charms of baseball is the fact that the customer quickly loses himself in the ball game, if it's interesting, and is quite oblivious to whether it is being played at night or in the afternoon.

The paradox is that the biggest squawk about night ball has come from the ball players, themselves. They are pouting about the disturbance of their routine and such nonsense, forgetting that night baseball is their bread-and-butter. They ought to be grateful for the turn in affairs, else they wouldn't be getting the salaries they're now hauling down because the clubs couldn't afford it.

As for night ball's effect on the caliber of play, there has been none whatsoever. The good hitters are hitting as well under the lights as in the daytime, and the better pitchers are winning both by day and by night. The lights are no longer any excuse for anybody.

Washington fans may be spoiled a bit about night ball because of the fact that Griffith Stadium is the best-lighted park in the league. The lights in St. Louis and Chicago don't compare with the Washington lights. Philadelphia's system is tolerable enough except for the shadows in the outfield.

Washington's lights are the best because, as the engineers say: "They're the latest. The next park that is lighted will be better." The Cubs and Red Sox want to put the lights in, and the Yankees would have had them this minute if they could get materials and the Ruppert estate wasn't tied up by Federal tax demands.

Phils Blank Cards, 1-0, on Lee's 6-Hitter

St. Louis, June 29 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies and St. Louis Cardinals played it out in pitching entirely today as Bill Lee gained a 1-to-0 victory over the Champion Redbirds in 10 innings.

Geoge Munger, trying for his eleventh victory over the season, brought about his own downfall by issuing successive walks to Tony Lupien and Elvin Adams, then allowing Jimmy Wasdell to single in the winning run after two were out in the tenth.

Each pitcher gave up six hits, scattered very thinly. The Cards threatened twice, once in the first inning when Johnny Hopp walked and went to third on Stanley Musial's single, then again in the seventh, when Musial led off with a single and advanced to third on Danny Litwhiler's single after two were out. That was the strongest batting attack the Cards were able to muster.

The victory was Lee's second successive 1-0 shutout over the Cards. It was Munger's second defeat of the season.

Rain Halts Buc-Giants Tilt in Fifth; Score, 1-1

Pittsburgh, June 29 (AP). — A heavy thunderstorm halted the New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates after they had battled for five innings to a 1-1 tie, today.

Bill Voiselle had a 1-0 lead when Jack Barrett opened the fifth with his tenth triple and scored the tying run on Babe Dahlgren's single.

The Giants tallied in the first inning when Johnny Rucker and Mel Ott singled, and Rucker scored as Frank Zak fumbled Ernie Lombardi's grounder.

The Giants garnered four hits off Nick Strincevich while the Pirates could only muster three off Voiselle.

Dubiel Holds St. Louis to Two Blows

New York, June 29 (AP).—St. Louis' Browns choked off two New York Yankee scoring threats in the early innings today but permitted the World Champions a single run in the last of the ninth for a 1 to 0 triumph that cut the visitors' league lead to 2½ games.

Walt Dubiel, 24-year-old rookie for the Yankees, was found for only two blows while the winners nicked Sig Jakucki for seven and their second straight over the first-place Browns.

Bud Metheny opened the ninth frame with a single and was sacrificed to second by Herschel Martin. Johnny Lindell filed out and Nick Etten was passed but Rollie Hemsley bashed a long single to center for the counter that meant the New Yorkers' sixth victory in a row.

Lindell opened the second with a triple but was thrown while trying to score on Etten's fly. Two singles followed. George Sternweiss doubled to start the sixth but was wiped out at third on Metheny's attempted sacrifice. A single by Martin came next.

The Browns, on top of the league standings much of the season, now have lost seven of the nine games played with the Yankees.

Ky Laffoon Paces Victory Golf Leaders

Chicago, June 29 (AP).—Ky Laffon of Chicago, an old-timer on the money circuit, coupled a two-under-par 69 with his first round 68 for a 137 total today and pivoted his team into the early proamateur, pro-woman lead of the victory national golf championships.

His feminine partner, mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich., combined an 80 with her 82 of yesterday for a 162, while his amateur buddy, steel-worker Steve Kovach of Pittsburgh, Pa., posted as 73 with his 72 for 145. These combinations bingoed for a pro-amateur aggregate of 82 and a pro-woman mark of 299.

Sam Byrd of Detroit and Bob Cochran of St. Louis, the 1943 pro-amateur champions, slipped after leading the fields yesterday. Byrd had a 72 for 142 total while Cochran took a 75 for 143. This gave them a pro-amateur score of 285. In the same team Betty Jane Haemerle of St. Louis shot an 83 for a double-round score of 164, which, added to Byrd's total, gave the combination a 306 in the pro-woman division.

Mrs. Ames Wins Feature At Aqueduct

Aqueduct Race Track, New York, June 29 (AP).—The good fortune which has been following Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Wheatley Stable, Trainer Jim Fitzsimmons and Apprentice Bobby Permane took a turn the other way here this afternoon.

The combination was represented in the featured previous (Class C) Handicap by Irish Tar, a colt which had run second in his last four outings. The son of Hard Tack apparently broke loose from his jinx when he finished first by a head, but was disqualified after lengthy deliberation by the stewards. Furthermore, the game sprinter broke down, which probably accounts for the fact that he ducked out in the final drive and bothered Henry Lustig's Mrs. Ames. The latter was awarded the $2285 first money through the disqualification. Irish Tar ruled favorite.

Heads Flying Doug

Mrs. Ames headed A. T. Simmons' Flying Doug, which was placed second. Stephen Messana's Faiseur, beaten another half length in the bunched finish, was awarded the show.

Ted Atkinson, back in the limelight, rode Mrs. Ames to that filly's initial score of the year and thus rounded out a triple. It was Ted's thirty-first success of the meeting and his 141st of the year. Mrs. Ames paid $11.20.

The time for the 6-furlong headliner was 1:12 2-5. The sweltering heat kept attendance down to 17,451.

Irish Tar's game effort was further enhanced by the fact that he carried top weight of 121 pounds, conceding plenty of weight to five other 3-year-olds. Permane, who rode four winners the previous day, was shut out on today's card as a result of the disqualification, Atkinson taking honors for the afternoon.

Irish Tar Threatens

Irish Tar shook loose from Flying Doug after the pair staged a duel to the stretch. He pulled away but faltered temporarily as Mrs. Ames challenged, swerving out. The Wheately colt then held on tenaciously to no avail, as matters turned out.

Angus Scott, a Negro jockey, took a bad spill in the hurdles race today when Pennypacker fell at the fourth obstacle. Scott was reported to have a possible concussion and was sent to Mary Immaculate Hospital (Jamaica) for further examination.

Gasparella's Educated Arm May Make Irish Forget Bertelli

By Oscar Fraley

New York, June 29 (U.P.).—Notre Dame is coming up this fall with a passing star who will make the subway alumni forget about accurate Angelo Bertelli and Jarrin' Johnny Lujack, Head Coach Ed McKeever predicted tonight.

This aerial program is Joe Gasparella, a 17-year-old behemoth from Vandergrift, Pa., the steel section of the Keystone State which has sent so many lads out to win fame and fortune on the gridiron. And to listen to the handsome McKeever, this untested freshman with the educated arm is a cinch to rank with the greatest of the Fighting Irish.

McKeever, who looks like a college player despite his 33 years, succeeded lachrymose Frank Leahy as Notre Dame's head coach and has a tough job in getting a weak squad ready to face such rivals as Pittsburgh, Tulane, Dartmouth, Wisconsin, Illinois, Navy, Army, Northwestern, Georgia Tech, and Great Lakes.

Very Optimistic

"But, believe me," the former Texas Tech backfield star grinned, "I'm very optimistic. We'll make our weight felt against all of them, with the possible exception of the three service teams.

"And the reason I'm so optimistic is this Gasparella. I've never seen a lad with so much natural talent and with the proper development I believe he'll be one of the all-time greats. He can throw anything, hard or soft, and feints like a veteran. All he needs is a little more poise and self-confidence."

The newest of Notre Dame's gridiron glamour boys is plenty of youngster. Son of an iron puddler in a Vandergrift steel mill, Gasparella goes up 6 feet 4 inches, and has some 205 pounds bearing down on his arches. Shy and quiet, he proved an outstanding defensive back during spring drills, when the outgoing veterans poured it on him in scrimmage but couldn't draw a whimper—and very few yards.

The current Notre Dame set-up is very slim, for besides Gasparella the Irish have only one experienced back reporting for duty. He is Bob Kelly, the Chicago youth who got his big break in last year's Army game and proved to be one of the day's best ball-toters.

Line Has Been Shattered

That massive Irish forward wall has been shattered, too. All that are returning from the big front line that carried Notre Dame to the mythical national championship last fall are three second stringers. But this trio will be plenty of help.

Two are tackles, George Sullivan, a 200-pounder from Walpole, Mass., and Johnny Adams, 225 pounds of bone and muscle from Charleston, Ark. The other is Guard Frank Ruggerio of Orange, N. J., a mere 200-pounder.

And that is the nucleus of Notre Dame's next football team.

"But there's no use of crying," grinned the bronzed McKeever, in direct contrast to the wailing and weeping Leahy whenever a player stubbed a toe. "Everybody's getting the same dose these days and so we'll hold our own with everybody except possibly Army, Navy, and Great Lakes.

"We'll probably be a 4-to-1 shortender against Army, the first of the three service rivals we'll meet. But don't forget, we've been that lightly regarded before—and went out to win."

Which boils down to the fact that the Fighting Irish still will be a pretty fair bet against all comers.

Bosox Still Beating Chisox, This Time, 5-4

Boston, June 29 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox took their ninth game in nine starts against the Chicago White Sox today, 5 to 4, with Tex Hughson marking up his eleventh victory, although he was relieved in the fifth inning after giving up 11 hits.

Red Barrett pitched the last four innings holding the 5-4 advantage he inherited.

The Red Sox had a four-run rally in the second at the expense of Ed Lopat. Manager Joe Cronin opened with his fourth homer of the season. Then Roy Partee and Skeeter Newsome singled. Tex Hughson sacrificed and all were safe when Partee beat the throw to third.

Tom McBride's walk brought in one run and Pete Fox's single scored two more.

The White Sox scored one in the third when Wally Moses singled, stole a base, advanced to third on Roy Schalk's infield hit and came home on Hal Trosky's long fly to center.

The other three Chicago runs came in the fifth on four hits—singles by Thurman Tucker, Trosky and Vince Castino and a double by Grey Clarke.

Grant Rice Scores in Top At Delaware

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., June 29 (AP).—Grant Rice, from the Longchamps Farms, made it four in a row at Delaware Park today by taking the sixth running of the Diamond State Stakes in the best time in the history of that event.

While he had only three opponents, Grant Rice covered the 9 furlongs in 1:50 3-5. The track record for the distance is 1:49 4-5. The victory was worth $8645 to the winner, who was installed a heavy favorite and returned $3.10.

Mrs. E. DuPont Weir's Galactic was second, Crispin Oglebay's Boy Knight was third, and Walter M. Jeffords' Dawn Watch brought up the rear.

Boy Knight took the early lead, with Nick Wall content to coast along in second place with Grant Rice under restraint. This order, with Galactic third and Dawn Watch last, was maintained to the final turn, when Wall gave Grant Rice his head.

Once headed, Boy Knight wearied and Galactic slipped into second place without difficulty.

A crowd estimated at 8500 saw Trainer Preston Burch receive a trophy from Donald P. Ross.

High School.

Detroit, June 27 (AP).—The Detroit Lions of the National Football League announced today the signing of Russ Lee Morrow, 6 ft. 8 in. center from St. Louis University who weighs 200 pounds.

Morrow is the sixth new player signed by the Lions, whose 1943 roster is largely in the armed forces.

Reynolds Hurls 3-Hitter, Leads Hitting as Indians Whip A's, 6-0

Philadelphia, June 29 (AP).—Allie Reynolds held the Philadelphia Athletics to three hits and banged out two doubles and a single himself in a 6-0 shutout for the Cleveland Indians today.

Dick Siebert, the A's veteran first baseman, suffered a severe spike wound of the right leg sliding into second base in the fourth inning, and was carried off the field. One of the Athletics' key men, he may lost to the team for several weeks.

The Indians bunched five hits with an error by Russ Christopher, A's starting pitcher, for five runs in the second inning. It was Reynolds' eighth victory against seven defeats.

Maryland Bass Season Opens Tomorrow

Baltimore, June 29 (AP).—As many as 18,000 fishermen will open the bass season in Maryland fresh water springs and lakes tomorrow, the State Game and Inland Fish Commission predicted today.

Commission officials said muddy streams might prove a disturbing factor on opening days but fishermen could expect a good season since the streams were relatively low and had been stocked with about 250,000 small and large mouth bass during the last year.

The officials estimated there are about 30,000 fishermen in Maryland. The leading fresh water areas were listed as follows:

Lower Susquehanna River, Potomac River from Hancock to Washington, Monocacy River, Conocoheague River, Antietam River, Deep Creek Lake and several Eastern Shore lakes.

The creel limit for fresh water catches is 10 per day for the season, which will close November 30.

The Tidewater bass season will not open until August 1 but will extend through March 31, 1945. The Tidewater bass creel limit is 20 per day.

Springbrook Entry Pays Only $3.60

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 29.

The Springbrook Farm's Strolling Don proved too speedy for three others and ran off with the main portion of the purse in the Grant Purse, best offering on the Thursday program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. Under good handling by Jockey Sammy Palumbo, the 5-year-old finished two and a half lengths in front of Dr. G. T. Strother's Randle's Queen with O. T. Brice's Star Governor, third and Mrs. J. Goodwin's Spanish Uhl, fourth and last in the vest pocket field.

Strolling Don in making it two out of three victories at this track returned a $3.60 mutuel as the favorite. He was clocked in 1.20-3-5 over a fast track, under bright skies and before an estimated crowd of 2500.

Palumbo Sets Early Pace

Palumbo rated Strolling Don in last position during the early stages of the six and one half furlong event. Star Governor and Randle's Queen vied for pacemaking honors. On the backstretch

Show Business Takes Bow at RKO-Keith's

MUCH HAS APPEARED on this page from time to time—some of it no longer ago than yesterday—concerning the stupendous contribution "show business" has made to the entertainment of the armed forces, both within our home borders and on all the far-flung fighting fronts of this global war.

That valiant story now may be enjoyed in visual and audible form on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater.

"Follow the Boys," which introduced itself to Washington in a sold-out War Bond Premiere on Wednesday night, and yesterday morning began its regular run as the screen attraction on Fifteenth Street, is heralded as "show business' tribute to show business"—the pseudo-factual depiction of the origin and operation of the Hollywood Victory Committee and USO-Camp Shows.

Taking the form of a gigantic vaudeville bill, this Charles K. Feldman production for Universal release fulfills its function effectively, if not too efficiently.

Scenarists Are Lax

What complaints may be lodged against it rest wholly on the typewriters of Gertrude Purcell and Lou Breslow, authors of the screenplay, who contrived a woefully weak romantic narrative to lace together the two hours of variety entertainment that knits itself into the backbone of the serviceman's diversion, and upon the cutting room, which seems to have been not too much worried about piecing together a smooth continuity.

But the authentic outline of an enormous achievement is there, with a topline act on view at every turn of the cameras. By a free use of actual and montage shots of Army and Navy installations, hospitals, outposts and firing-lines, this gargantuan vaudeville show has been made to encircle the earth, with proportionate impetus to its interest and importance as unique, lively and purposeful entertainment.

The whole thing starts with the expiring gasp of Broadway's famous Palace Theater, the Gibraltar of the two-a-day, and the demise of vaudeville, as such, closely following the end of the last war. The audience at that closing performance is sprinkled with the great of the theater. For many of the troupers, that was the end. But not for Tony West.

Young Man Goes West

The mainstay of one of the headline acts, Tony hies West to Hollywood, "muscles" his way into a partnership, and finally marriage, with one of the great dancing stars of the cinema and then, with Pearl Harbor and our entry into the present conflict, abandons his career to organize the Hollywood Victory Committee and USO-Camp Shows, as his bit in the war effort after having been turned down by the Army.

The utterly preposterous estrangement of the couple, because he will not confide that he was refused for armed service and she finds it impossible to convey to him that she soon is to have a baby is a sorry complement to an otherwise proud and believable record of hard work, sacrifice and patriotic devotion.

That record runs up an imposing monument to the adaptability and ardor of show business, contributed to by a competent cast and a staggering list of "guest" stars.

Such "dramatic" framework as the picture has is tacked together by George Raft and Vera Zorina, as the Tony Wests, and Charles Grapelin, Grace McDonald, Charles Butterworth and Regis Toomey in loosely defined relationships evidently dredged up to preclude the possibility of "Follow the Boys" being referred to with equal laxity as a "documentary" of the theater's part in the war.

Vaudeville Roll Call

When Tony West begins to marshall his forces, however, it is a totally different story. By adroit use of the star tours of the front, the "Command Performance" short-wave broadcasts and the junkets of the USO-Camp Shows all over the face of the earth, logical use is made of the talents of one of the greatest array of artists ever assembled.

Jeanette MacDonald has two appearances, one gay and the other in the convalescent ward of an Army hospital; the incorrigible W. C. Fields executes his classic pool table routine in an Army mess hall; a rabbit produces Orson Welles from a top hat to put on his Mercury Wonder Show, in which he saws Marlene Dietrich in half; Artur Rubinstein, concert pianist, short-waves for the boys overseas; Sophie Tucker entertains in her robust fashion, Carmen Amaya clicks off her amazing flamenco dances and the Andrew Sisters bob up at a Naval Station and aboard a transport in the South Pacific.

Dinah Shore sings entrancingly in a variety of settings, the Delta Rhythm Boys put on their turn in the jungle and Louis Jordan and His Orchestra perform for an anti-aircraft outpost in a driving rain.

Youthful Note

Donald O'Connor and Peggy Ryan sound the juvenile note in a couple of snappy numbers and Leonard Gautier's "Bricklayers," demonstrate the importance of canines in building emergencies.

In addition to the Jorgan group, Ted Lewis and His Band, Charlie Spivak's Orchestra and Freddie Slack and his, build up a musical background that gives the goings-on body, melody and rhythm.

"Follow the Boys" is not one of Hollywood's super-colossal, spectacular productions, but it is an eminently realistic one.

An interesting and timely Pathe News is the only auxiliary of the slightly more than two-hour-long feature.

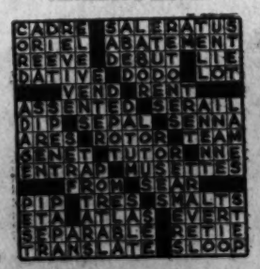
YESTERDAY'S ANSWER



Men Hosts At USO Meet G. I. Joe Need for Friends

By Genevieve Reynolds

Who won the baseball game today? Where can I find a group of chess players? What is the best fishing stream around here? Will you introduce me to the Rotary Club president? These are only a few questions GI Joes put to the new men hosts in USO clubs throughout the country.

"As younger men move into front line action, the more mature soldier takes his place in servicemen's clubs," explains Miss Mary Louise Vetter, national program consultant for the Women's Division, National Catholic Community Services, a member agency of USO. Hence the increasing demand for more men hosts around the clubs."

"You can't give the older soldier stereotyped activities. They want more than dancing . . . smaller group activities and individual attention," declares the youthful program consultant, who was among the first trained in 1941 to enter USO work.

The gray-eyed curly-haired, bedimpled Kentucky miss started as an area worker, traveling with the back seat piled high with files. Then she became an assistant club director; now national program consultant.

Good Talkers Needed

"Men hosts have to be good talkers," observes Miss Vetter. "Not only must they know the whereabouts of the best tennis courts or the Little Theater groups in the vicinity, but the ins and outs of civic activities and how best to enter.

Servicemen 18 to 24 are content with games or dancing. The older men want to know the solid citizenry of the community," she continues. Also they like older men around with whom they can exchange ideas."

"Are the pretty junior hostesses losing prestige?" we queried.

"Yes," replies Miss Vetter. "Just as waltzes are replacing hot jive or jitterbug dances, so are the older men and women hosts supplanting younger hostesses. Before battle experiences young soldiers prefer the pretty, young, gay hostesses. Afterward, older women with a motherly air take the spotlight."

Baby Care Fun for Them

A few days ago Miss Vetter walked into a USO club in one of the war production areas. Four young GIs were crawling on the floor. Sounds of a lullaby mingled with the jingling of "dog tags." Upon closer inspection, she found the young soldiers entertaining a group of babies, while their parents went to the movies.

"Often younger soldiers take care of the babies and smaller children," she beams enthusiastically. "Either it's for a married buddy or some unknown warworker. They want to give the parents a chance to have a little fun."

Prior to entering USO work, Miss Vetter held jobs in the city recreation department and juvenile court in her home town, Louisville. She was graduated from the University of Louisville and Nazreth College.

Couple Are Ideally Happy Except for One Thing: Wife's Nervous Dread in Company Shuts Sociable Husband Off From Friends

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are both 27. We have been married four years and have a son, 3. We have been very happy except for one thing. That is,—we never have entertained people in our home or accepted invitations to parties, etc., because being in a group of people makes me very nervous and self-conscious, to the extent that I can't be natural. I have been somewhat like that all my life, even around my relatives, so that I would sometimes avoid them.

My husband likes to play cards but I have never learned to play any kind of card game, because whenever I have been playing cards with anyone, trying to learn, I got so nervous my mind simply went blank. My husband is no gadabout, but he does like people and likes to invite them to our home. He loves his home and every minute he is home he is doing something for our boy or me. He does everything possible to make us happy. He has been so patient with me, but I can see he is not happy.

Yesterday, when he came home from work, he said he had asked several people he works with to come up to play a new card game. He said he thought I might like it. He said it was very easy to play and loads of fun. Before I could speak, my actions spoke for me. He noticed at once and said; "Oh, let's call it off and have them later. Maybe next week." I didn't say anything, but inside I was greatly relieved until I saw a look of disgust on his face as if to say, "Oh, what's the use."

My husband has often said he likes to see me happy and won't I please try to overcome that feeling I have. Honestly, it worries me so at times that I get sick and have to go to bed. I hope you can understand the trouble and give me some advice. I feel I can't go on this way much longer. If only I could be around people and act natural I would be completely happy. L. D. G.

Latent Meaning Of Wife's Distress

DEAR L. D. G.: Your nightmare dread of company means that subconsciously you are haunted by deeply apprehensive guilt-feelings, which in most cases get a hidden grip on the personality in early childhood, as plainly happened in your case,—inasmuch as you testify that you have tended to be nervous and fearful in the presence of outsiders, even relatives, practically all your life.

Your latent sense of guilt undoubtedly has reference to some forgotten childhood conviction of wrongdoing, or (as you may have imagined at the time) of hideously wicked thinking or wishing. Tangled and blended with that buried early conviction of wrongdoing or evil thinking may be the residual memory (long since faded from conscious mind) of an accompanying experience of sharp punishment and supposedly public shame. Let's assume, to illustrate, that you were overtaken in some childish misdemeanor by an elder, who made a loud to-do about it, by spanking, lecturing and "shaming" you in the presence of others; as a well-meant (though stupid) reminder to you not to do it again. If you were an extremely sensitive child, and it appears you were, that experience would deal a compound shock to your emotional and nervous system,—bringing in its wake exactly the train of symptoms you have suffered.

By and Large, She's As Good as the Best

YOU WOULD be borne down at the center of self with such reactions as these: 1. A sense of horrid guilt. 2. With naive uncertainty as to the exact nature of your heinous offense, seen through adult eyes, and as to how you might have avoided it. 3. With bitter resentment and an instinctive impulse to vengefully even the score, directed at the person who exposed, punished and shamed you, and at those bystanders who tacitly sided with that person. 4. With the helpless realization that you were no match for any of them, and must play safe by cravenly suing their favor on their terms. 5. With repressed guests of hatred (engendered by your fiercely resentful helplessness) toward those you felt morally obliged to love, honor and obey,—a disturbing reaction that would cause you to tremble at your own supposed wickedness. And so on,—until you had become in spirit a worried recluse; all due to a wrong road you took; imaginatively, as a result of childhood mishandling.

The person who is neurotically ill at ease in company, as you are, is afraid subconsciously of being "found out" in some way. He is a person psychically stigmatized by an early ingrained bad opinion of himself. One whose early experiences have encouraged him to be greatly self-respecting is naturally at ease, unself-conscious and agreeably confident in social interchange because he feels instinctively that he is as good as the best, and has no ugly frailties to hide. Yet, by and large, neither is worse nor better than the other; and the permanent remedy of the neurotic's distress consists in becoming aware of this truth and governing his social behavior accordingly. The prescription for cure in your case is this: Get an expert psychiatrist's help (1) in filtering your memories of their poison-contents; and (2) in developing a positive way-of-thinking based on valid self esteem. They Done Us Wrong

Lipsticks are better than they have been for a long time due to relaxing of restrictions on castor oil.

(OWI News Release.)

I.

I laid in lipsticks for five years,
And was sure that I could gloat
Over all my friends not smart enough
A suave future to promote.

II.

Now WPB has balled things up
My forethought naught avails,
The only bullish stock I have
Is polish for my finger nails.

III.

On my couple of electric irons,
And several good alarm clocks,
My friends no longer gaze with awe,
They have their own new stocks.

IV.

My basement's full of old canned goods
And other packaged groceries,
I thought at least their prices soon
Would soar beyond the "freeze."

V.

But OPA has still held on,
Even Congress failed me there,
By refusing to enact the laws,
To make more millionaires.

VI.

As things are now no citizen
Is safe in what he can collect,
A good tight law there ought to be
Us hoarders to protect.

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

The Maud Muller Service League has abandoned its efforts to recruit Truthtown debs and matrons to work on the farms this summer. Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, director of the project, announced yesterday that the league would close its headquarters at the Hotel Swank.

"The movement to discourage women farm workers from wearing halters and shorts in the fields has played havoc with our recruiting," explained Mrs. St. Vitus. "Naturally, few of our smart young matrons and debutantes wish to cover themselves in overalls and shirts to work in the fields when such stunning and abbreviated play clothes are being shown for beaches. Then, too, we were discouraged by the failure of designers to create a large picture hat that would stay on the head in a wind."

Mrs. St. Vitus branded as "incredible in this day and age" the report that farmers and their wives did not approve of the halter and shorts outfits worn by some women volunteers.
